श्री १०८. स्वर्गवासी श्रीदेवेन्द्र कीर्त्ति स्वामी,

भट्टारक.-बलात्कारगण, कारंजा.

स्वामीजी की स्मृति में

कारंजा में बलात्कारगण के भट्टारकों की गद्दी की स्थापना मान्यखेट से आये हुए धर्मभूषण भट्टारक द्वारा विक्रम संवत् १५७५ में हुई थी। इस परम्परा में अबतक कोई बीस भट्टारक हो चुके हैं। इनमें से अनेक ने अपनी विद्वत्ता प्रकट करके निजाम राज्य से सनदें प्राप्त की हैं। पट्ट के स्थापित होने से बरार में जैनधर्म का जो प्रचार हुआ है उसके फलस्वरूप इस प्रान्त के प्राय: प्रत्येक नगर और ग्राम में जैन धर्म के पालक, इस गण के अनुयायी, बहुसंख्या में पाये जाते हैं। हमारे भट्टारकों का धर्मप्रचार के अतिरिक्त साहित्यवृद्धि की ओर भी पूरा ध्यान रहा है। इन्ही की कृपा से हमारे शास्त्रभण्डार में एक सहस्र से अधिक हस्तलिखित,प्राचीन ग्रन्थ सुरक्षित हैं! इनमें अनेक ग्रन्थ स्वयं हमारे भट्टारकों के रचे हुए भी हैं।

हमारे अन्तिम गुरुमहाराज श्री १०८ भट्टारक श्री देवेन्द्रकीर्ति स्वामी बड़े शान्तिप्रिय और साहित्यप्रेमी थे। उन्होंने अपने जीवनमें उक्त भण्डार के संग्रह को सुव्यवस्थित किया। उनके स्वर्गवासी होनेके समय से ही उनके अनुयायिओं की उत्कट अभिलाषा थी कि उनकी कीर्ति को अक्षय और दिगन्तव्यापी बनाने के लिये उनके नाम से कोई साहित्यिक स्मारक खड़ा किया जावे। किन्तु अनेक विघ्नबाधाओं के कारण अबतक इस अभिलाषा की पूर्ति नहीं हो सकी थी। हर्ष का विषय है कि आज हमारी कई वर्षों की वह अभिलाषा पूर्ण हो रही है।

गुरुमहाराज के नाम से स्थापित इस ग्रन्थमाला के संचालन के लिये हमारे पास कोई स्थायी सम्पत्ति नहीं है। पर हम यह जानते हैं कि हमारे गण के प्रत्येक सदस्य के हृदय में स्वामीजी के प्रति अटल श्रद्धा और भक्ति है। इसी को हम हमारी ग्रन्थमाला का ध्रुवफण्ड समझते हैं। हमें पूर्ण विश्वास है कि हमारे बन्धु इस ग्रन्थमाला के कार्य में धनाभाव की कोई रुकावट न पड़ने देंगे। जो भाई इस पुण्यकार्य में योग देंगे उनके ज्ञानावरणी कर्मों का क्षय होगा और उनका निर्मल यश इसी ग्रंथमाला द्वारा संसार में फैलेगा।

स्वामीजी की स्मृति में

प्रस्तुत ग्रन्थ के प्रकाशन में हमें पूर्ण आर्थिक सहायता श्रीयुक्त नागोसा रतनसा रायबागकर, द्वारा प्राप्त हुई है। इसके लिये हम व हमारा मण्डल उनके कृतज्ञ हैं। दाता ने अपनी धार्मिक बुद्धि और स्वामीजी में भक्ति का प्रत्यक्ष प्रमाण उपस्थित किया है। आशा है अन्य बन्धु इस आदर्श का अनुकरण करेंगे।

हमारे धर्मबन्धु श्रीयुक्त प्रोफेसर हीरालालजी ने इस ग्रन्थमाला को जन्म देने तथा प्रस्तुत ग्रंथ के सम्पादन में जो निस्स्वार्थ और अटूट परिश्रम किया है उसके लिये यह मण्डल आपका चिर-कृतज्ञ रहेगा। उन्होंने ग्रंथमाला का सम्पादकत्व स्वीकार करके हमारी अनेक वर्षों की अभिलाषा को सफल किया है।

हमें विश्वास है कि धर्मप्रेमी और साहित्यप्रेमी भाई हमारी त्रुटियों को क्षमा कर ग्रन्थमाला की उन्नतिमें सहयोग प्रदान करेंगे।

निवेदक

देवेन्द्रकीर्ति ग्रन्थमाला का कार्यकारी मण्डल—

PREFACE

It was in the year 1924 that I first discovered the NĀYAKUMĀRACARIU of Puspadanta from the manuscript stores at Kārañjā which I examined in my capacity as a Research Scholar of the Allahabad University. The notes that I made on that occasion were included in the Provincial Catalogue edited by Rai Bahadur Hiralal and published by the C. P. Government The Apabhraṃśa works discovered there interested me very much and I contributed an article on 'Apabhraṁśa Literature' to the Allahabad University Studies Vol. I, and determined the date of Puspadanta who was the chief of the authors, first in the notes contributed to the Catalogue and then in an article contributed to the Hindi Quarterly 'Jaina Sahitya Samśodhaka Vol. II.' In the following year I came to occupy my present post at Amraoti, and, being now closer to Karanja, I tried to arrange for the publication of the works. My efforts met with a ready response which enabled me to organise two societies for the work of publication.

It might be asked why two series of books have been started when all the works could very suitably be included in a single one. The answer is to be found in the genuine desire of the members of the Balātkāra-gana to preperuate the memory of their spiritual leader, the late Svāmi Devendrakīrti Bhaṭṭāraka, by a separate series. This is in the fitness of things as the present collection of MSS. preserved in the Balātkāra-gaṇa temple owes a good deal to the efforts of the late Svāmī. It is in order to make the work of the two series mutually collaborative that the editorship of both has been entrusted to me.

Unlike the sister series, the present series has been started without any permanent funds to begin with. The society has, however, acquired a rich fund, I mean a fund of good will all around, which is expected to help it through the venture. The society is highly obliged to Mr. Nagosa Ratansa Raibagkar of Amraoti who has borne the costs of printing the present volume. It is hoped that the noble example of this gentleman will be followed by others interested in rescuing the ancient literary treasures of the Jains from oblivion.

I now come to my most interesting duty of acknowledging the help that I received in the preparation of this volume. My deep obligations are due to Mr. Ratanlal Narsinsa Raol and his colleagues in the management of the Balātkāra-gaṇa Jaina Bhāṇḍāra who entrusted the editorship of their series to me and lent out to me their two MSS. of the present work (MSS. A & B.). Facilities for collating the other three MSS. were secured for me by my friend Dr. Tarachand Gangawal, M. B. B. S., Palace Surgeon, Jaipur, Master Motilal Saṃghi, Sanmati-Pustakālaya, Jaipur, and Pandit Nāthuram Premi, Bombay. For this help I am greatly indebted to these gentlemen.

Rai Bahadur Hiralal has laid me under a deep debt of gratitude by encouraging me in my literary activities throughout and, on this occasion, by sending to me his valuable article on 'the Nagas of Central India', which I have fully consulted and even quoted from in the Introduction on 'the Nāgas and the Nāgaloka.' I have also consulted his 'Descriptive Lists of Inscriptions in C. P. and Berar' for the same section.

I am thankful to Prof. V. V. Mirashi, M. A., Head of the Department of Sanskrit in the Nagpur University for kindly drawing my attention to the references to Nāgaloka in the Navasāhasāṅkacarita.

My obligations are due to all the authors whose works I have consulted, referred to or quoted from, mention of which will be found in the list of abbreviations.

I am very highly obliged to my friend Dr. P. L. Vaidya of Poona for his valuable suggestions and advice in the editing details and his inestimable help in getting the work printed in Poona. The distance between the editor and the printers would have caused a good deal of delay in the completion of the volume and would surely have affected its printing quality had it not been for Dr. Vaidya's presence on the spot and his keen interest in the matter. I am also thankful to the Manager and staff of the Shree Ganesh Printing Works, Poona, for doing their best in the execution of the work.

I am indebted to my Principal, Mr. F. P. Tostevin, for recommending to the Local Government to permit me to undertake the editorship of the series. and for encouraging me and helping me in various ways.

With such co-operation as I have been receiving, I expect to be able to carry on the work of the series. Suggestions for improvement in any direction will always be very welcome.

Amraoti.

INTRODUCTION

I. Critical Apparatus

The present edition of Ṇāyakumāracariu is based upon the following five MSS. fully collated :—

This MS. is deposited in the Balātkāra-gana Bhāndāra of Kāranja. Leaves 88, size 11″ x 5″ ; lines per page 9 ; letters in each line about 34 ; margin right and left 1½″, top and bottom ¾″. One inch-square space is left blank in the middle of each page. It bears the following colophon :—

शुभं भवति लेखकपाठकयोः । संवत् १५५६ वर्षे चैत्र शुदि १ शनावद्येह श्रीघनौघद्रंगे श्रीजिनचैत्यालये श्रीकुन्दकुन्दाचार्यान्वये भट्टारक श्रीपद्मनन्दिदेवास्तत्पटे भट्टारकश्रीदेवेंद्रकीर्तिदेवास्तत्पट्टे भट्टारकश्रीविद्यानन्दिदेवास्तत्पट्टे भट्टारकश्रीमल्लिभूषणदेवास्तत्पट्टे भट्टारकश्रीलक्ष्मीचन्द्रोपदेशाद् हंसपत्तने श्रेहादा तद्भार्या बदी तयोः पुत्रः सांगण तस्य भार्या सोमाई एतेषां श्रीसांगणकेन लिखापितं ॥

( on the last page in another hand )

भट्टारकश्रीकुमुदचन्द्रपट्टे भट्टारकश्रीअभयचन्द्राणां पुस्तकम् । संवत १७८५ वर्षे शाके १६५० कीलकनाम-संवत्सरे माघमासि प्रतिपात्तिथौ सोमधूसेन वमस संपदे सूरतिबंदिरे वांसुपूज्यचैत्यालये गिरनारयात्रागमनसमये भट्टारकश्री धरमचंद्रपट्टधारि-देवेंद्रकीर्तिभ्यः रामजी संघाधिपपुत्र आणंदनाम्ना हूबड़ श्रावकेण दत्तमिदं पुस्तकं ।

From this colophon, we learn that the MS. was completed on Saturday, the 1st of the bright fortnight of Caitra, in Samvat 1556, equivalent to 1499 A. D., in the Jain temple at Hamsapattana, according to the instructions of Bhattaraka Laxmicandra, for whom we get the following geneology :- -

Kundakundanvaya
Padmanandi
Devendrakīrti
Vidyānandi
Mallibhūsaṇa
Laxmicandra ( A. D 1499 ).

The subsequent history of the MS. is told in the additional note made later on the last page. The MS. belonged to Abhayacandra the successor of Kumudacandra. It was presented to Devendrakīrti, the successor of Bhaṭṭaraka Dharma-candra, by a layman Ānanda son of Rāmji, at port Surat, at the time of the former's pilgrimage to Girnara on the 1st of Māgha. in Saṃvat 1785, Śaka 1650 Kīlaka Saṃvatsara, equivalent to A. D. 1729. This appears to be the time when the MS. migrated to Kāranjā, its present home.

Peculiarities of the MS.

1. Nasal ण occurs four times as frequently as न.
2. It shows a partiality for ए in absolute forms such as णिसुणेवि, करेवि etc., and in the seventh-case-ending such as मंडणे, भवणे etc.
3. It omits a number of lines that are found in MSS. D and E.
4. It bears glosses on the margin like B and D. About this gloss, more will be said in the sequel.

MS. B.

This MS. also belongs to the Balātkāra-gaṇa Bhāṇḍāra of Kāranjā.

Leaves 136; size 11″ x 5″; lines per page 7; letters per line about 28; margin right and left 1½″, top and bottom 1″. It has no original colophon and no date. At the end, in second hand, we read भट्टारकश्रीकुमदचंद्र त० भ० श्रीधर्मचंद्रस्येदं ।

This Kumudacandra is probably the same as the one mentioned in A and Dharmacandra a co-disciple of Abhayacandra. If this is true, the MS. existed about 1729 A. D. It agrees, almost through-out, with A in its readings and other peculiarities, and bears similar glosses. It is on very thin paper and is now fast wearing out.

MS. C.

This MS. belongs to the Terāpanthī temple of Jaipur. Leaves 49; size 11″ x 5″; lines per page vary from 12 to 14; letters in each line about 44; margin all round ″. It bears the following colophon :—

संवत् १५५८ वर्षे श्रावण सुदि १२ भौमे ॥ छ ॥ श्रीगोपाचलगढदुर्गे तोमरवंशे अश्वपति गजपति नरपति राज्यत्रयाधिपति महाराजाधिराज श्रीमानसिंघदेवाः तद्राज्यप्रवर्तमाने श्रीमूलसंघे बलात्कारगणे सरस्वतीगच्छे कुंद-कुंदाचार्यान्वये भट्टारकश्रीप्रभाचन्द्रदेवाः तत्पट्टे भट्टारकश्रीपद्मनंदिदेवा भट्टारकश्रीशुभचंद्रदेवा भट्टारकश्रीजिनचंद्रदेवाः तदाम्नाये जैस ालान्वये साधु साचाइ भार्या करमा तत्पुत्र ४ ( family details ) एतेषां मध्ये थोमा। इदं नाग-कुमार पंचमी लिखापितं ज्ञानावरणीकर्मक्षयार्थं । ज्ञानवान् ज्ञानदानेन etc.

From this we learn that the MS. was completed on Tuesday, the 12th of the bright fortnight of Srāvana, in Saṃvat 1558, equivalent to 1501 A. D., at Gopācala (Gwāliar), during the regin of Mahārāja Mānasiṃha of Tomara dynasty. It was written for a layman of the Jaisawala family which had, for its spiritual guidance, the following line of teachers :—

Mūlasaṃgha. Balātkāragaṇa, Saraswatīgaccha, Kundakundānvaya
Prabhācandra
Padmanandi
Śubhacandra
Jinacandra

It agrees with AB in the use of न and in the omission of a number of lin es But in readings it generally agrees with E. It bears no notes on the margin.

MS. D.

This MS. also belongs to the Terāpanthī temple of Jaipur. Leaves 71; size $11\frac{1}{2}'' \times 4\frac{1}{2}''$; lines per page 10; letters per line about 37, margin all round 1". It bears the following colophon:—

संवत् १६०३ वर्षे शाके १४६७ प्रवर्तमाने महामाङ्गल्यआषाढमासे कृष्णपक्षे द्वितीयातिथौ उत्तराषाढ. नक्षत्रे तैतलकरणे श्रीमूलसंघे नंद्याम्नाये बलात्कारगणे सरस्वतीगच्छे श्रीकुन्दकुन्दाचार्यान्वये भट्टारकश्रीपद्मनंदिदेवा-स्तत्पट्टे भट्टारकश्रीशुभचन्द्रदेवास्तत्पट्टे भट्टारकश्रीजिनचन्द्रदेवास्तत्पट्टे भट्टारकश्रीप्रभाचन्द्रदेवास्तत् शिष्यमंडलाचार्य श्रीधर्मचन्द्रदेवास्तदाम्नाये तक्षकपुरवास्तव्ये सोलंकीराजाधिराज राजश्रीरामचन्द्रराज्ये श्रीआदिनाथचैत्यालये खंडेलवालान्वये बाकुलीवालगोत्रे सा. पाल्हा तद्भार्या गौरी तत्पुत्र सा. न्येमा (family details) एतेषां मध्ये सा. नेता भार्या लाझमदे तृतीय सा. ठाकुरभार्या दाडिमदे तया इदं शास्त्रं पञ्चमीव्रत–उद्योतनार्थं लिखापितं धर्मचन्द्राय दत्तं । ज्ञानवान् ज्ञानदानेन etc

From this we learn that the MS. was completed on the 2nd of the dark fortnight of Āṣāḍha. in Samvat 1603, Śaka 1467. equivalent to 1546 A. D. It was copied for a layman of Bākliwāla family of the Khaṇḍelawāla caste, a resident of Takshakapur (Taxila), in the kingdom of the Solamki king Rāmacandra. He had for his spiritual guidance, the following line of teachers:—

Mūlasaṃgha, Nandi-āmnāya Balātkāra gaṇa, Saraswatigaccha,

Kundakundānvaya
Padmanandi
Śubhacandra
Jinacandra
Prabhācandra
Dharmacandra (To whom the MS. was presented).

It will be seen that this carries the line given in the colophon of MS. C, two successions further.

The MS agrees in its peculiarities with A and bears glosses like it on the margin. But it has all those additional lines that are found in E. These are mostly given in the margin. It even gives a few lines peculiar to it alone.

MS. E.

This MS is deposited in Bābā Dulicand's Bhāṇḍāra in Jaipur and belongs to that section of the collection which was acquired from Sañgāner Bhāṇḍāra. Leaves 55; size $10\frac{1}{2}'' \times 4\frac{1}{4}''$; lines per page vary from 13 to 15; letters per line about 35. It bears the following colophon :—

सं. १५१९ जेष्ठ वदि १२ चंद्रे ॥ आदौ ॥ जेष्ठ सुदि ५ ॥ गुरौ संपूर्ण भवत् ॥ वागर देसे । झुंझुणूग्राम-नगा श्रीआदीश्वरचरचैत्यालये । सरस्वतीगच्छे श्रीमूलसंघे लंवेचू वुढेले गोते लिखितं पंडित सा. महराज चौधरी सा. भीषमसुत । कर्मक्षयानिमित्तं ॥ संकोडियकरचरणा etc.

From this we learn that the MS. was begun on the 12th of the dark fortnight and completed on the 5th of the bright fortnight of Jyestha in Samvat 1519, equivalent to 1462 A. D. . in the Ādiśvara temple at Jhunjhunū in Vāgara country, by one Pandit Mahārāja Caudhari son of Bhisama, of Vudhelo family of Lamvecu caste.

This MS. is the most interesting of all, as it is the oldest and has many features that distinguish it from the rest.

1. It has ण instead of न throughout.
2. It shows a great partiality for इ in preference to ए in the absolute forms and the seventh case-ending e. g. वंदिवि, मुणिवि, चित्ति, मज्झि etc.
3. It frequently avoids the insertion of य or व between two vowels unlike all the other MSS, e. g. सुअण for सुयण; पहाओ for पहावो.
4. It omits the author's praśasti which all the other MSS. give at the end, and like C, bears no glosses on the margin.
5. Where its readings differ from the constituted text, it agrees more frequently with C than the others.
6. It has many lines which are not found in ABC and are added in D only in the margin.

From the description of the MSS. given above, it will be seen that they are fairely representative of the manuscript-tradition of Ṇāyakumāracariu over a very wide area. Of the four MSS. mentioning their place of copying, one comes from Gujrāt, another from Gwāliar (Central India), the third from Punjāb and the forth from Rājaputānā. They fall into two groups, AB and CE, D forming a link between the two, agreeing with the former in orthography and the glosses, with E in the matter of additional lines and frequently agreeing with this or that in its readnigs.

2. Text--constitution.

I have followed the following principles in constituting the text of Ṇāya-kumāracariu :—

1. I have, as a rule, adopted in the text the reading on which all or most of the MSS. agreed. But in a few cases the reading of two or even one MS is preferred to that of the majority where it seemed to be justified by the superiority in sense and suitability. For the same reason, I have even given a tentative reading in preference to the agreed reading of all the MSS. This, however, has been done in a very few cases, and there also when the change made was of one letter only.

2. As the MSS. that use न are not at all consistent in its use and as no principle can be evolved from them for discriminating between न and ण, the latter has been used throughout, for the sake of uniformity, and the variations have not been recorded.

3. The MSS are somewhat, inconsistent in the use of व and ब. In this case the choice has been made according to the Sanskrit or vernacular equivalents and the variants have not been recorded.

4. च्छ and त्थ are found so written in the MSS. as to be frequently indistinguishable. Generally it has been easy to find out which of them is meant, but the problem has, sometimes, become puzzling when either gives sense, for example वित्थिण्ण or विच्छिन्न in 1, 3, 5. In such cases only, the alternative reading is included in footnotes, otherwise not

5. क्ख, ट्ट and ड्ड have been frequently found written as double ख, double ठ and double ढ. These also have not been noticed in the footnotes.

6. The MSS. show some inconsistency in the insertion of य between two vowels and MS. E, as said above, generally avoids it. These variations have, in some cases, been noted but frequently ignored.

7. As we have no device to distinguish short ए from long ए and as readings vary between short ए and इ the latter has, generally, but not invariably, been used where the metre required a short vowel. These variations have been ignored in the footnotes.

8. Variations due to obvious mistakes and slips of the copyist have not been noted, but readings of doubtful meaning have been.

9. Other minor variations such as of °हु and हो and of anusvāra have been ignored.

In all other cases the variants have been carefully recorded.

3. The Poet and his Patron.

Much information about the parentage and the works of the author has already been published ( C. P. Cat. intro. and extracts; AUS. p. 157–185; JSS vol.

II, p. 57-80, 146-156; JJ 1st Oct. and 1st Nov. 1926; Jasa. Intro. ). From these the following facts about the author and his works can be gathered :—

1. Puspadanta was the son of Keśavabhaṭṭa and Mugdhādevi, Brahmins of Kāśyapa gotra,

2. He travelled to Mānyakhoṭa from somewhere and was patronised by Bharata, and later, by his son Nanna, both ministers of Krisnarāja alias Vallabha-rāja, who may be identified with Krisṇarāja III of the Raṣṭrakūṭa dynasty of Mānyakheṭa.

3. The poet mentions the following three historical events of his time :—

(i) The king of Mānyakheta, here called Tuḍigu, killed the Cauda king ( identified with Rājāditya Cola killed by Krṣṇa III in A. D. 949 ).

(ii) The king of Dhārā burnt Mānyakheta. This king is identified with the Parmār prince Harṣadeva.

(iii) A severe famine razed over Mānyakheta. This event is surmised to have followed the raid of the capital by Harṣadeva (Jasa. IV, 31,8).

4. Three works of the author have so far been discovered, Mahāpurāṇa or Tisaṭṭhi-purisa-guṇālamkāra in 102 chapters, Jasaharacariu in 4 chapters and Ṇāyakumāracariu in 9 chapters.

5. The author began his Mahāpurāṇa in Siddhārtha Samvatsara and completed it in Krodhana Samvatsara, Āshādha sukla 10 Sunday the 11th June, 965 A.D. In the present work the author mentions Krsnarāja as still ruling at Mānyakhota. For his successor Khoṭṭigadeva we have a stone inscription dated in the Saka year 893 = A. D. 971. This date, therefore, is the terminus ad quem for the composition of our work.

6. In the Mahāpurāṇa Puspadanta describes himself as of tender constitution and ugly appearance, homeless, dressed in rags and barks, bathing in rivers and pools and sleeping on bare ground. Never-the-less he was equanimous towards the rich and the poor and friendly to all. He had a high sense of self-respect and was excessively fond of poetry as is shown by the epithets Ahimanameru and Kavvapisalla which he frequently uses for himself in all his works, though they were originally given to him by his critics some of whom, however, did not omit to decry him, 'केण वि कव्वपिसल्लउ माण्णिउ केण वि थड्ढु भाणिवि अवगण्णिउ।'

I shall now confine myself to what the author says about himself in the present work and the circumstances that led him to compose it. In the colophon of each Sandhi we are told that it is the work of Mahākai Pupphayanta, Sanskrin Puspadanta. At the beginning of the work the poet introduces himself as the sot of Muddhāī, Skt. Mugdhādevi, and Keśavabhaṭṭa of Kāsyapa gotra. He was re, siding in the house of Nanna in the city of Mānyakheta when two persons Nāilla and Sīlaiya, pupils of one Mahodadhi approached him, eulogised his talents and expressed their desire to hear from him the story of Nāgakumāra, illustrating the fruit of observing the fast of Śri-pañcami. He was also requested to the same effect by Nanna the minister of Vallabharāya, and Nāilla and Silaiya urged him to associate the work with the name of Nanna. The poet acceded to their request and began the story.

Four, out of the five MSS. used, give at the end what is called the author's Praśasti. Besides the usual information about his parentage, the author here records something that has not been told anywhere else. He tells us that his parents were at first devotees of Śiva but " they had their ears filled by the ambrosia of the teacher's words and so they died by the Jaina form of renunciation." We have here, no doubt, the mention of the conversion of Puṣpadanta's parents from Śaivism to Jainism.

Puspadanta has, in all his works, profusely eulogised his patrons. In the Mahāpurāṇa he tells us that when he reached Mānyakheta, he was received with great honour by Bharata, the king's minister who kept him in his own house and induced him to write poetry. The Mahāpurāṇa is dedicated to him (' Mahābhavva-Bharaha-anumaṇṇia ' approved by the noble Bharata). Bharata was a Brahmin of Kauṇḍinya gotra. His father's name was Aiyana or Annaiya, mother's Śridevi and wife's Kundabbā or Kanakadevi. He had seven sons, Devalla, Bhogalla, Nanna, Sohaṇa, Guṇavarma, Dangaiya and Santaiya. Of these Nanna seems to have succeeded his father, either because his elder brothers died premature or because of his surperior talents. Two works Jasaharacariu and Ṇāyakumāracariu are dedicated to him, the former being called Nanna-kaṇṇāharaṇa, an ornament to the ears of Nanna, and the latter ' Naṇṇa-ṇāmankia ' stamped with the name of Nanna. He has been highly eulogised in Kaḍavaka 3 and 4 of Chap. I of the present work. One of his adjectives, Vicchinna-Sarāsai-Bandhava, seems to me to suggest that Nanna took particular interest in the revival of Prākrta poetry which was going out of use as we know that almost all of the Jaina authors who lived immediately before Puṣpadanta, for example, Jinasena, Guṇabhadra, Somadeva, Akalamka and others, wrote in Sanskrta. Of the other brothers of Nanna, Sohaṇa and Guṇavarma or Guṇadharma, while yet young. had a hand in inducing the poet to compose the Ṇāyakumāracariu and Daṅgaiya is mentioned in the ending eulogy. The office of ministership was hereditary in the family but there seems to have been an interruption just before Bharata who is said to have restored the family to the position which it had lost. In the verse prefixed to the second chapter of Jasaharacariu, mention is made of Nanna's sons. Thus, in Puṣpadanta's works we find mention of the four generations of this illustrious family, associated with the ruling dynasty of Mānyakheta during the tenth century.

We are not sure that we have discovered all the works of Puspadanta. Hemacandra, in the commentary to his Desīnāma-mālā mentions Abhimāna-cinha five times (I,144, VI, 93 ; VII, 1 ; VIII, 12, 17.,) and quotes from his Sūtra-pātha and Vṛtti which appear to be some lexicographic works of Deśī words like the works of Dhanapāla and Hemacandra. Abhimāna-cinha does not seem to be a proper name but a title like the Abhimāna-meru of our poet. It is not unlikely that the two be identical, in which case our author can be credited with the authorship of a lexicography also. Similarly, the author of Śivasiṃhasaroja mentions a poet named 'Puṣpa' who wrote a woek on Alaṃkara in Dohā metre about V. S. 700. (See 'Hindi' by Badrinath Bhaṭṭa, page 17). No wonder if here also our author be meant. The points, however, must be left here for further research in future.

4. Manyakheta-a literary centre.

Mānyakheṭa, where the present work as well as the other two works of our author were composed, has been identified with Malkhed (N. Lat. 17° 10′; E. Lon. 77° 13′) included in the Hyderabad territory of his Exalted Highness, the Nizam of Hyderabad. It was known to the Arab writers as Mankir. It is not now 'the champion of the beauty of the celestial city, crowded with people and with flower gardens' as it was in the time of Puspadanta: it is in ruins, the site being marked by a small village. The capital was founded by Amoghavarsa of the Rāṣṭrakūṭa dynasty in 815 A. D. and it continued to flourish till the dynasty was supplanted by the Cālukyas about 973. During this period of more than a century and a half, it formed a great centre of literary activities and revival of Jaina learning. Amoghavarśa had clear Jaina tendencies. He is said to have worshipped the feet of Jinasena who wrote the Sanskrt Ādipurāṇa and the Pārśvābhyudaya Kāvya under his patronage. He is associated with the large commentary on the grammar of Śākaṭāyana which has been called Amoghavṛtti after him. It was under him that Mahāvira made his great contribution to the development of Mathematices by writing his Gaṇitasāra, He himself is said to have written the Kavirājamārga, a work on poetics, in Kanarese. He is the author of that beautiful little Kāvya, Ratnamālikā, which, according to his own statement, 'he composed when he had abdicated the throne on account of the growth of ascetic spirit in him' (Bhand. Re.) It was during the reign of Krishna II that Gunabhadra completed the work of his teacher Jinasena by writing the Uttarapurāṇa. The reign of Krishna III saw the appearance of the Jwālāmālini-kalpa of Indranandi 939 A. D., the Yaśastilaka Campū of Somadeva in 959 A. D., and above all, the works of our author. The famous Kanarese poet Ponna also flourished under him and was honoured with the title of Ubhaya-bhāsā- cakravarti by the king himself, Indrarāja IV of the dynasty is said to have renounced his kingdom like his ancestor Amoghavarsa, and ended his days according to the Jaina form of renunciation. Numerous Jaina temples at Śravana Belgola and other places in the South record the munificence of the descendants of Amoghavarsa in the service of Jainism. It was this fame of the Rasṭrakutas which must have attracted Puspadanta to their illustrious capital which 'scraped the sky by its mountain-like high palaces' and which, in the poet's own words, was—

'दीनानाथधनं सदाबहुजनं प्रोत्फुल्लवल्लीवनं
मान्याखेटपुरं पुरंदरपुरीलीलाहरं सुन्दरम्'।

(See EHD. p. 93-96; EHI. p. 387; Bhand R. Vol. II; EC. Vol. II; JSS. Intro. p. 75-80).

5. Popularity of the hero

Nāgakumāra is recognised by the Jains as one of the twenty-four Kāmadevas, i. e. the most beautiful persons that ever lived. Our author has, therefore, called him by all the different names of Cupid, such as Kāma, Madana, Ananga, Jhasaketu and the like. He is said to have attained his personal charms and heroism by observing the fast of SriPañcami in his previous birth It is no wonder, then, that various authors tried to write the account of his life in different languages at different times. Besides the present work, I have been able to discover the following authors and works or their mention in the works of others.

1. Tribhuvana Svayambhū wrote 'Pancamicariam.' This work has not so far been discovered, but the mention of it is found in the introductory part of Paumacariu of Svayambhu—तिहुयणसयंभुरइयं पंचमिचरियं महच्छरियं. We are told in the same work that Svayambhu left his work incomplete and it was completed by his son Tribhuvana Svayambhu. As Puspadanta has mentioned Svayambhu in his Mahāpurāna, this work seems to have preceded the present work, though, in that case, it seems rather strange that no mention of it is found here. This work also seems to have been written in Apabhramśa.

2. Jayadeva wrote the life of Nāgakumāra as we know from the mention of Mallisena ( see below ).

3. Mallisena wrote Nāgakumāracarita in five cantos. The author, who styles himself as Ubhayabhāsā-cakravartī, says that he has rendered in Sanskrit verses what Jayadeva and others wrote in prose and verse. The beginning of the work is—

श्रीनेमिं जिनमानम्य सर्वसत्त्वहितप्रदम् ।
वक्ष्ये नागकुमारस्य चरितं दुरितापहम् ॥ १ ॥

कविभिर्जयदेवाद्यैर्गद्यैः पद्यैर्विनिर्मितम् ।
यत्तदेवास्ति चेदत्र विषमं मंदमेधसाम् ॥ २ ॥

प्रसिद्धसंस्कृतैर्वाक्यै र्विद्वज्जनमनोहरम् ।
तन्मया पद्यबन्धेन मल्लिषेणेन रच्यते ॥ ३ ॥

Other works attributed to this author are 'Padmāvatīkalpa', Brahmavidyā and Ādipurāṇa ( JG 216 ; JSA 381-384 ). The author is probably identical with the ascetic commemorated by the Mallisena Praśasti at Sravana Belgola ( ISB 67 ; JSIS 54 ). There are several MSS. of this work at Kāranja ( CP Cat. ) and elsewhere. It has been noticed in the MAR. 1924. The story in this work is in substantial agreement with that of our work

4. Dharasena wrote Nagakumaracarita in Sanskrit verse in eight cantos. The Kāranja MS. of this work is slightly incomplete going upto 164th verse of canto 8th. But other complete MSS are also known to exist.

Beg. नेमिं नमत्सुराधीशमुनीशमनघश्रियम् ।
नत्वा नागकुमारस्य वक्ष्ये संक्षेपतः कथाम् ॥

The author is probably identical with the author of the homonymous lexicography known as Viśvalocanakoṣa or Muktāvalikoṣa (ed. Nātharanga Gāndhi, Bombay 1912).

5. Rāmacandra Mumukṣu wrote Puṇyāśrava-kathā-koṣa in Sanskrit verse. It contains fiftysix stories illustrative of the fruit of various religious fasts and practices amongst which is also to be found the story of Nāgakumāra Kāmadeva, which is in substantial agreement with our story. MSS. of this work are found at several places. A Hindi prose translation of the work is published (trans. by Nathuram Premi, Bombay 1907).

6. Candrasāgara Brahmacāri is said to have written Nagakumāra-satpadī in mixed Sanskṛt and Kanarese, six thousand ślokas in extent (JG 79).

7. Jina Muni is said to have written Nagakumara-satpadī in Sanskṛt with a commentary in Kānyakubja Bhāṣā (JG 98).

8 Dharmadhara is said to have written Nagakumara-katha (JG 137).

9. Mallibhuṣana Bhaṭṭāraka is said to have written Nagakumara-carita about Samvat 1510. He is also said to be the author of Bhairava-Padmavati-Kalpa, Patrakesari-kathā, Sripālacarita and Sajjanacittavallabha (JG 215).

10. Malliṣena is said to have written Nagakumāracarita in Kanarese. A MS. of this work, consisting of fifteen palm-leaves, is deposited in the Jaina-Siddhānta-Bhavana, Arrah (JSA 378). The work is said to be one thousand ślokas in extent. This author is probably identical with No. 3 above, who is said to be Ubhaya-bhāsā-cakravarti i. e. master of two languages, probably Sanskrit and Kanarese.

11. Bāhubali Kavirājahamsa wrote Nagakumara-carita in Kanarese. A MS. of the work consisting of sixtytwo palm-leaves is deposited in the Jaina Siddhanta-Bhavana, Arrah (JSA 379).

12. Ratnakara Kavi wrote Nagakumara-carita in Kanarese. A MS. of this work, consisting of 126 palm-leaves, is deposited in the Jaina-Siddhanta-Bhavana, Arrah (JSA 380)

13. There is a Nagakumarakavya in Tamil (SIJ p. 103).

14. Nathamala Vilāla wrote Nagakumara-carita in Hindi verse. He is said to have lived at Bharatapur and written about Samvat 1834 = 1777 A. D. He is credited with the authorship of four other works, Jinaguṇavilasa, Siddhanta-sara, Jivandhara-carita and Jambūsvami-carita. (JG 7; HJSI p. 80.)

15. Gopilāl wrote Nagakumara-carita in Hindi verse He is credited with the authorship of two other works (JG 22).

16. Udayalāl Kaśliwāla translated the work of Malliṣena in Hindi prose (pub. Bombay, 1913).

17. An ancient prākṛta work of unknown date, Nivvāna—kāṇda, mentions Nāgakumāra as a great sage who, along with his two associates Vyāla and Mahāvyāla attained salvation from the Ashtapada mountain ( pub. Bombay 1914).

णायकुमारमुणिंदो वालमहावाल चेव अज्झेया ।
अट्ठावयगिरिसिहरे णिव्वाण गया णमो तेसिं ॥ १५. ॥

18. An Apabhramśa work Sāvayadhammadohā mentions Nāgadatta as having attained heaven by the observance of a fast and subsequently reborn as Nāgakumāra—

उववासहु इक्कहु फलइं संबोहियपरिवारु ।
णायदत्तु दिवि देउ हुउ पुणरवि णायकुमारु ॥ १११ ॥

The above list can not be claimed to be exhaustive, but it is sufficient to show how popular the story of Nāgakumāra has been with Jaina authors from ancient times down almost to the present day. It is probable that some authors utilized the theme prior to Puspadanta, but unless and until their works are discovered and their date is determined, the present work can claim to be the oldest on the subject.

6. The Poet's Education.

In the introductory part of his Mahāpurāna, Puspandanta says that he had seen nothing of the works of Akalamka, Kapila, Kanacara, Pātañjali, Bhāsa, Vyāsa, Kālidāsa, Svayambhū, Śri Harsa, Bāna, Rudrata, Nyāsakāra, Piñgala and many others. But he has completely belied himself in his works. I shall here confine my remarks to the present work alone to show that its author was familiar not only with the Hindu, Buddhist and Jaina religion, philosophy and mythology but also with all those technical branches of literature, a knowledge of which formed a necessary part of the equipment of an accomplished poet in ancient India.

As might be expected, the poet shows a thorough grasp of the tenets of the Jaina faith to which he turns frequently but which he has particularly mentioned once (I, 12) and expounded twice (IV, 2-4; IX, 12-14). On these sections of the work, the reader will find in the notes numerous references to the works of Kundakundācārya, Umāsvami, Samantabhadra and Vattakera, some of the most ancient Digambara Jaina writers, showing that our poet was well read in them. Once (IX, 5,5) we find mention of the two questions, namely wearing cloth and eating food during the stage of omniscience, round which ranges a long controversy between the two sections of the Jain community the Digambaras and the Śvetāmbaras. Various doctrines and beliefs of the Hindu and the Buddhist religions have been mentioned and commented upon in seven passages (5 to 11) of chapter nine. Systems of philosophies such as Sāmkhya, Mīmāṃsā, Ksanikavāda, Śūnyavāda, and Īśvaravāda and some of their founders Kapila, Aksapāda, Kanacara and Sugata are named. Even the materialist school of Bṛhaspati has not been overlooked (IX, 11).

For poetic embellishment the author has drawn considerably upon the Hindu mythology contained in the Purāṇas. Brahmā has been called the 'Lotus-born' and 'aja' (I, 5, 10; IX, 7. 5) and Rudra or Śiva figures with his consort Pārvati, his three eyes, his trident, his bowl and garland of skulls. The stories of his burning of Cupid and cutting off the head of Brahma also come in for review (III, 14, 9; IV, 12, 9; VIII, 6, 2; IX, 7, 5). Similarly Viṣnu appears with his consort Laksmi and the cowherd-maids (Gopis) and his lifting up the Govardhana mountain and slaying of Madhu aud Śiśupāla are familiar events to the poet, III, 7, 16; VII, 3, 9; VII, 15, 3; VIII, 4, 13; VIII, 16, 6; IX, 3, 8). The lifting of the earth by the boar, the churning of the ocean by the gods and the earth being supported on the hood of a serpent are also within his knowledge (I, 4, 8-10; VII, 1, 6.). Other gods such as Indra and his consort Paulomi, Yama Vaivasvata and Kubera or Dhanapati find frequent mention while Brhaspati's learning and his defeat by his rival, Rambha's personal charms and Cupid's flower arrows have received our poet's recognition (I, 4, 2; IV, 6. 8; IV, 6, 15).

For the same purpose the Mahābhārata and the Rāmāyana have been freely drawn upon. The five fiery Pāndavas and their destruction of the Kaurava forces, Arjuna's going to Drona for instructions and his enmity with Karna, the liberality of the latter and his fight against his own brothers, the purity of the character of Bhiṣma and his turning away from the battle-field, the righteousness of Yudhisthira and his troubles of exile, and Vrkodara with his mace serve the poet for his similes and metaphors (I, 4; II, 14, 12; III, 14, 4; IV, 10, 17; VIII, 15, 1-4). He mentions Arjuna as Nara and Karṇa as Ravinandana which shows that he was not deriving his knowledge of the Bhārata story exclusively from the Jaina books. He mentions Rāma and Sitā as ideal man and woman, Sugrīva and Hanumat as waiting upon Rama and Hanumat's loyalty for his master though he was a monkey, and Rāvana's fighting the forces of the gods (I, 4, 3; IV, 6. 8-9; IV, 11. 2.) His allusion to the death of Ravana at the hands of Laksmana (III, 14, 5) is clearly derived from the Jaina Padmapurāṇa, but his probable reference to Vasiṣtha's falling into trouble for his hospitality to Viśvāmitra can be from no where else than Valmiki's Rāmāyana (III, 3, 3, see notes).

The poet's reference to three buddhis, three saktis, pañcāṅga mantra, arisadvarga, seven vyasanas and seven rājyangas shows his knowledge of works on state-craft such as Kāmandakīya Nītisāra and Kauṭilīya Arthaśāstra (1, 8).

Some of the poet's similes are derived from the stellar region; for example, his pun on kumbha as water jar and the constellation aquarius or the elephant's temple and the constellation in union with Saturn, on Hasta as the elephant's trunk and the constellation Carvus in union with the moon. He also speaks of the Sun being eclipsed by Rāhu and of Yuti, that is confluence of planets, as auspicious (I, 10, 2; III, 17, 9-12; VII, 8, 5; IX, 2, 5.)

THE POET'S EDUCATION

The description of the limbs of Nāgakumāra's body is in accordance with Varāhamihira's description of Mahāpurusalaksana ( III , 4 see notes ), while the mention of the various fine and useful arts in III, 1, and the handling of amorous situations in other parts of the work presuppose a knowledge of works on erotics such as Vātsyāyana's Kāmasūtra.

The kinds of flowers mentioned in the work are kamala ( lotus ), kuvalaya or indīvara ( blue lotus ), kumudinī (lily), sthala-padma ( ionidium suffruticosium), campaka and nrpa-campaka (sweet-scented calophyllum ), jūti or mūlati (jasminum grandiflorum ), jūhi skt. yūthikā ( jasminum aurieculatum ), ketaki ( pandanus odoratissimus ), punnūga ( ochrocarpus longifolium ), tilaka, bakula (surinum medlar), and mandāraka ( calotropis gigentea ). The kinds of grass mentioned are trṇa, dūrvā, kuśa and kaseru, the last as particularly dear to boars. Other trees and plants that have found mention in the work are, nyagrodha or vata ( bunyan ) pippal ( ficus religioza ), śallaki ( boswelia therifera ), pīlu (salvadara parsica), śoli (vaterisindica), sahakara or mākanda (mango), rūi (gigontic swallow-wart), kadalī ( plantain ), iksu and pundreksu (kinds of sugarcane) and drūksa (grapes). Among corns are mentioned sali or kalama ( rice ), yava ( barley ), yavanūla (great millet , mudga (green grain ) and lankeśa or caṇaka (gram. )

The domesticated animals mentioned are go (cow), Dhavala (bullock) mahisa ( buffalo ), aśva (horse), gaja (elephant), bokkaḍa skt. chāga (goat). karabha (camel) and khara (donkey); wild animals, simha ( lion), vyaghra (tiger), kola (boar) and hariṇa (deer) and birds hamsa (swan), vaka (crane), śuka riñcha or kīra (parrot ), kokila (cuckoo), ghūra skt. grddhra (vulture), śikhi (peacock), and chakravaka (ruddy goose or duck). Of these, the elephants are said to be specially fond of śallaki. the goat of rui and camel of pilu ( see VII, 2 text and notes).

Turning now to the poetic qualities of the work we find that it is full of beautiful similes and metaphors drawn from the whole range of Aryan mythology and history and frequently, and more effectively from the poet's own observation of nature and human experience. I shall here draw attention of the readers only to one or two typical and significant similes. The pitched up tents of Nāgakumāra's camp looked like the shaven heads of slave-girls ( VII, 1, 15 ). The Pāndyan princess did not like any suitor as a person with his mouth burnt with slake-lime (of his betel ) does not like boiled rice ( VIII, 2, 6 ). Nāgakumāra liked Laxmimati as a beggar Brāhmin likes the Sankrānti (an occasion for alms- giving IX, 2, 6) ; he was fond of her as a grammarian is of the derivation of words (IX, 2, 9). The descriptions of the Magadha country and the town of Rajagrha (I, 6-7), of Prthvidevi as a bride (1, 17,) of the march of the army and its encampment (VII, 1-5) and of the battle scenes (IV, 15; VI,14; VII,7; VIII,15) are beautiful and fascinating. The poet is particularly fond of yamaka and ślesa some striking examples of which are found in the description of the women of Rajagrha going to worship the Jina (1, 10), of the vicious horse (III,14,) of the feast given by Vanarāja (VI,9), of the resolve of Arivarma's warriors (VII,6), of the arrows of Sukaṇṭha and those of Nāgak. (VII, 14), of the bunyan tree (VIII. 9), of the submission of the warriors and marriage of the maidens (VIII. 16), and of the water jars used for the coronation of Nāgak. (IX, 2.). The poet's play upon the word vārana (II, 5, 3-4) and on baddha (VII, 9) and the series of similes describing Nāgakumāra's liking for Laxmimati (IX, 2) together with the above mentioned examples of yamaka and sleṣa exercise the mind as well as entertain it, by exhibiting all the elegance and ornamentation of artificial poetry. In fact the whole work is teeming with sweet alliterations, appropriate and striking paronomasia and delightful fancies. These the poet has well succeeded in combining with swift and easy narrative. The story is meant to illustrate the fruit of a religious fast but it has been told in the grand manner of a kāvya. The poet has rightly invoked the goddess Speech 'moving in the mansion of a mahākāvya, resplendent with her double ornaments, taking soft, sportive padas with multifold blandishments and feelings, giving delight by commendable sense, combining all arts and sciences and exalted characterstics, moving by the broad-metre-road, bearing the ten qualities, sprinkled over with the nine sentiments and beautified with the three vigrahas.' By mentioning the ten prānas the poet has revealed his acquaintence with the works of Bhāmaha and Dandi. In the body of the work, besides the above invokation, the poet, by means of some stray similes, has told us what he considered to be the essentials of good poetry. A great poet would compose a sentimental kāvya in Mātrā metre (V, 2, 4 ; VI, 9, 5) a good kāvya requires a choice of brilliant forms and phrases (VI, 9, 8), a good poet pays attention to the style of language (IX, 2, 4), a poet graces himself by means of a story well told (IX, 3, 2) and shorn of ornamentation is the story of a quack-poet (III, 11, 12). He also tells us that a drama becomes exalted when it combines various sentiments (VI, 9, 6). His somewhat humorous reference to grammarians as fond of derivation of words has already been mentioned. In another simile he mentions the Kātantra grammar (VI, 9, 7).

The conclution to which we are led by these references is that the poet's statement that he knew nothing of the works of prominent writers of yore is a mere modesty as also his statement in the present work that he was unable to describe things being a dull poet (VI,9 11), and that his titles of Mahakai Vaesari-devi-nikea and kavva-pisalla stand amply justified.

7. Picture of palace and public life.

Palace and Polygamy :—The theme of the present story is the life of a prince and as such it gives us a great insight into the life at palace and incidentally also in public. Kings lived in palaces and seven storied buildings were known to the poet. The canon of measurements of such buildings formed part of a prince's education (III, 1, 9). An important part of the palace was the harem (antaḥpur) which was portioned out in many residences for the queens, of which there were generally more than one. Jayandhara married Pṛthvīdevī even when he had his first wife Visālanetrā who was perfect in every way, and a grown up son Śrīdhara. Inspite of their separate residence and independent household, rivalries and jealousies amongst the queens were inevitable. For checking these tendencies restrictions were sometimes placed upon the liberties of one of the parties and these were followed by defiance and consequent punishment in the form of forfeiture of ornaments ( III, 11-12 ). But such developments seem to have been restricted to cases where the rival queens happened to be of the same status and of an equally high parental stock as was the case with the two queens mentioned above. No such troubles probably occurred when the rivals happened to be concubines (bhogini) Polygamy was so firmly established in princely circles that the presence of one or more wives was never considered a disqualification in the suitor and never any hesitation was shown on that score by the parents of the bride. Again, there seems to have been no restriction about the parentage of a girl selected for the marriage of a prince. Even the first marriage of Nagak, was with two dancing girls and the marriage was recommended by his father himself with the remark ' the gem of a woman should be accepted though stockless ' ( III, 7, 8 ). They became the chief queens ( Mahādevi ) of Nagak. Vyāla married for the first time, Gaṇikāsundarī who was born of a concubine of the king of Pāṭaliputra, and Mahāvyāla, after marrying the princes of Pāṭaliputra, married the concubine's daughter of the Pāṇḍya king.

Marriage customs :—The practice of marrying the daughter of a maternal uncle was fully in vogue. Nāgakumara's maternal uncle had kept his daughter specially for marriage with his nephew (VII, 4, 5). A father-in-law was addressed as maternal uncle ( māma, IV, 11, 8 ). We find this principle of marriage followed by the Raṣṭrakūtas and the Kalacuris. The practice is very old in southern India having been enunciated by Apastamba ( AKJ. p. 84 ). But the people of the north have always deprecated it. Bauddhāyana and Vātsāyana declare such marriage irregular and even Kumārila Bhaṭṭa casts a fling at it ( sva-mātula-sutāṃ prāpya dākṣiṇātyastu tuṣyati, SKV. p. 133 ).

Yet another marriage custom deserves mention. We are told that Pṛthvidevī was brought from Girinagara to Kanakapura for marriage ( I, 17, 1 ). Similarly, the Kānyakubja princess was being taken to Siṃhapura for marriage with the king of that place when she was captured by the king-regent of Mathurā ( V, 2, 13-14 ). This points to a custom of the marriage party proceeding from the bride's side to the bridegroom's house where the marriage was performed contrary to the current practice of the marriage being celebrated in the house of the parents of the bride. I have observed this practice current upto the present day only amongst the Gonds of the Central Provinces (an aboriginal tribe), amongst whom the practice of marrying maternal uncle's daughter is also prevalent.

Pictures played an important in creating love between two parties. It was by seeing the portrait of Pṛthvidevī, brought by a merchant that Jayandhara fell in love with her ( I, 4, 12 ). Mahāvyāla took a picture of Nāgak, to the princess of Ujjain and thus aroused her love for the hero (VIII, 5, 16-17). Picture-making formed a part of a prince's education ( III, 1, 11 ).

Rivalries amongst a king's sons :—Rivalries for the throne amongst the sons of a king would show themselves in fratricidal intrigues which could be avoided from fructifying only by the banishment of the younger brother from the realm. The latter would then be thrown upon individual resources to earn a fortune. Personal charms, efficiency in music and in wielding the sword, helped Nāgak, under such circumstances. It was here, in particular, that the education of a prince in arts like those enumerated by our poet ( III, 1 ), would serve him well.

Fine Arts :—Singing, dancing and instrumental music formed an important part of the education of princes and princesses alike. The latter used to make proficiency in these arts as a test in the selection of a husband, as was done by the princesses of Kashmir and Meghapur who were married by Nāgak, after proving his skill in playing upon the Ālāpini and the Mrdanga respectively ( V, 7, 11 ; VIII. 7, 7 ) Nāgak. made his three queens dance in the Jina temple, to the accompaniment of the music of his Vīṇa ( V. 11, 12 ). At the time of Jayandhara's marriage with Pṛthvidevi the women of the town performed Tāndava dance ( I,18, 2 ), and at the time of Nāgakumāra's birth sportive women performed coquettish dance ( II. 9, 9 ) Musical instruments that have been mentioned in the work are:— viṇa, alapini and tantrī (kinds of lute), mardala, pataha, dundubhi, ḍhakka, bukka, bheri and mrdanga ( kinds of drums ), saṅkha ( conch ), jhallari and ghanta (bells) and tūrya ( a blow-instrument ).

Amusements and games:—The usual pastime of the princes was sport in a garden or tank in company of the inmates of their harem ( upavana-krīdā and jala-krīdā, II, 1; II, 5, 8; III, 8; V, 7; VIII, 1). Sprayers (jalayantra ) were used during water sports. But the game of dice with stakes ( aksa-dyūta ) was no less popular. There used to be special gambling houses ( tinta ) in a flourishing condition where courtiers used to play freely ( III, 12 ). The game was resorted to sometimes, even to earn money as was done by Nāgak. The latter was invited even by his own father for a game which he said 'was dear to gods, demons and men alike' (III, 13, 9). The following articles are mentioned in connection with the game-kaditta (board), kitta (bet), varādia (cowries), sāri (pawn or a piece) and pāsa (dice) (III, 12, 5; III, 13,10).

Military—Army is frequently mentioned as consisting of four divisions (cauranga), footman, horses, elephants and chariots. Regular soldiers of the army seem to have been granted lands for family maintenance (VII, 6, 7). During battles, the capture or death of the king was invariably a signal for general surrender. Military arms that have been mentioned are churikā, khadga, asi, karavāla and vasunandaka (kinds of swords), kunta, śula, sella, jhaṣa and aṅkuśa (kinds of spears), mudgara, gadā and musala (kinds of maces), cāpa, kodaṇḍa or dhanuṣa and bāṇa (bows and arrows), paraśu (axe) and kavaca ( armour ).

Trade—Merchants made long journeys and voyages for purposes of trade. A merchant from Magadha visited Girinagara in Saurāṣṭra by boat (salila-yāna, 1, 15, 6), and another from Kaśmir visited Sindha (V, 10). On their return, they waited upon the king with rich presents and gave an account of their experiences. They even arranged marriages of the princes as was done by the former.

Fashion and luxury:–The form of receiving a guest in the home was to offer a seat which consisted of a wooden plank, and betel (VI, 17, 10; VIII, 5,15). Other articles of luxury mentioned in the work are-scents candana ( sandal ), ghusrṇa or Kuṃkuma (saffron), Karpūra (camphor) mṛga-nābhi ( musk ), turuṣka ( benzoin ), yakṣa-kardama ( a compound of various scents, see notes on IX, 18, 13 ), lavaṅga ( cloves ) and elā ( cardamom ); jewels—sūryakanta ( sun-gem ), candrakānta ( moon-gem ), marakata ( emerald ), nilakānta ( sapphire ), manikya ( ruby ), sphatika ( crystal ) and muktā ( pearl ); ornaments—kundala ( ear-rings ), kaṅkana ( bracelet ), nūpura or manjira ( anklet ), hāra, graiveyaka and dorā ( kinds of necklace ), kānci-dāma or mekhalā ( girdle ) and mukuṭa ( tiara ). The kings used tents ( pata-mandava or dusa ) on their tours ( V, 1, 2; VII, 1, 15 ). Amongst coins are mentioned dinara and damma ( III, 12, 12; VIII, 5, 12, see notes ).

Faith in prophecy :—People had implicit faith in the prophecies made by ascetics. They not only believed in them but tried their utmost to bring about their fulfilment. When the king of Mathura was told that his sons Vyāla and Mahāvyāla were destined to serve somebody he became disgusted with the world and renounced the kingdom ( IV, 5–6 ). The two princes became servants of Nāgak. being guided by that prophecy. Five hundred warriors offered their services to Nagak. because they were told by a sage that whoever could eat the fruit of the poisonous mangoes without any injury was destined to be their master ( VII, 3, 8 ). The Vidyas and other valuables were kept for a long period in the Ramyaka forest by the deity Sudarśanā and the Rākshasa for Nāgak. in obedience to the prophecy of a sage ( VI, 1–8 ). Vanarāja received Nagak. and married his daughter to him because he was told to do so by a sage ( VI, 8 ) and the two princes Acheya and Abheya came to take up service with him for the same reason ( VI, 16–17 ).

9. The Nagas and the Nagaloka.

The hero of the work, while yet a child, is said to have fallen into a well where it was received by a Nāga who adopted him, gave him the name of Nāgakumāra and educated him. The Nāgas have played a very important part in the folklore, superstition and poetry of India from very early times down to the present day. It is generally believed in scholarly circles that there is nothing but fiction behind the Nāga-stories. A few attempts have recently been made to lift the Nāgas from the limbo of myth to the region of history, but the material available on the point is so vast and yet so complicated and disjointed that a prolonged study and research in collecting, sifting and connecting the parts in to a whole is necessary before any definite and generally acceptable conclusions can be reached I shall here merely mention some of the important allusions to the Nāgas in ancient records and the conclusions that have been or may be drawn from them.

Nāgas in the Mahābhārata—Nāgas are not mentioned in the Vedas or in the pre-Buddhistic Upanishads (BI p. 223). The chain of allusions starts with the Mahābhārata which contains numerous references to them. Arjuna, during his self-imposed banishment of twelve years, is said to have been taken away to Nāgaloka by Ulupi the daughter of a Nāga king. Nala is said to have saved Karkoṭaka Nāga from a fire and the latter made him irrecognisable and advised him to go to king Ṛtuparna. Nāgas are said to have infested the Khāndava forest and Krisṇa and Arjuna applied themselves to extirpate them with fire. Kṛsṇa's adventure with the Kāliya Nāga in the Jumna is well known. Taksaka Nāga is said to have bitten Pariksita to death and the latter's son Janamejaya started a Nāga sacrifice to wipe out their race. The Mahabha. attributes to them a high degree of civilization. According to it, "The Nagaloka extended thousands of yojanas on all sides and had many walls of gold and was decked with jewels and gems. There were many fine tanks of water with flights of stair-cases made of pure crystal and many rivers of clear and transparent water. Uttaṅka also saw many trees with diverse species of birds. The gate was five yojanas high and hundred yojanas in width" (MI p. 494).

When we read all these stories and accounts together we are lead to infer that Nāgas were a tribe which had a civilization of its own and with which the other ruling tribes of ancient India came frequently in conflict. The Pariksita and Janamejaya episode is interpreted as an allegorical record of an exchange of revengeful acts between the Nāgas and the Pāndavas. This view receives strength from the fact that some Buddhist books as well as the Rājataraṅginī mention deeds of extraordinary valour performed by the Nāgas and Taksaka, Karkoṭaka, Dhananjaya and Maṇi are mentioned as some of the most famous kings of the dynasty. Taksaka, according to Colonel Todd, "appears to be the generic term of the race from which the various Scythic tribes, the early invaders of India, branched off." The descendants of Taksaka, in his view, became known by names such as Takkha Taka, Takki, Ḍhaka or Dhaṅka and the like. Tribes known by these names are found in Rājaputānā and the Punjab even now. At Serāgaḍha in Kota State, there is a stone inscription mentioning Bindunaga, Padmanaga, Sarvanaga and Devadatta, the latter being alive in Vikrama Saṃvat 847, the date of the inscription. Even as late as 1800, the Nāgas formed the garrison of Khandela under Abhayasiṃha of Jaipur and they formed the irregulars of the Jaipur state army even later, ( Todd. p. 122, 1416, 1435 )

Rai Bahadur C. V. Vaidya tries to identify the Nāgas of the Mahabh. with the Dasyus of the Ṛgveda, thus making them the pre-Aryan aborigines of India like the Nāgas of Assām. He recognizes two distinct tribes amongst them, the poisonous i. e. the molesters called Sarpas, and the unpoisonous i e. the non-molesters called Nāgas. This he does on the authority of the Bhagvatgītā where Krisṇa says "Sarpanam-asmi Vasukih" and "Anantaś-casmi Naganam". He further says that at the time of the great war the chief of the Nāgas was known as Taksaka whom Arjuna wanted to chastise, but who escaped and founded Taksaśilā in the Punjab which finally became the seat of great learning during the Buddhist period ( Mahabh. Up.). In contrast to this view, Surgeon Major Oldham arrives at the conclusion that the Nāgas were a sun-worshipping, Sanskrit-speaking people whose totem was the Nāga or hooded serpent which gave their tribal name and that they were stigmatised as Asuras by the orthodox Brahmins as they did not readily admit the ascendency of the latter (Sun worship in India JRAS, July 1891). Though the present work makes no mention of sun-worship amongst the Nāgas, it does refer to their Nāga-totem in 'Ahi-aṇkaiṃ chiṇhaim dhoiaiṃ' (II, 14, 5). On the other hand Mr. N. L. Dey locates Pātāla, the habitat of the Nagas, in Central Asia and tries to identify all the Nāgas mentioned in the Mahābh. and the Purānas with the various Hunnic tribes ; for example, Śesa with Sses of Sogdiana, Vāsuki with Usuivis, Karkoṭaka with Kara-Kasak and so on (Rasatala or the Under-world).

Nagas in the Puraṇas—Many of the Purānas keep up the traditions about the Nāgas. The Visnu P. (Book II) gives a description of the Pātāla where the Nāgas dwell, and mentions their nine kings ruling at Padmāvatī, Kāntipuri and Mathurā. The Padma P. similarly describes the Pātāla loka and the abodes of the Nāgas. The Vāyu P. 99, 382; and the Brahmānda P. 3, 74, 194, mention nine kings of Nāga dynasty ruling at Campāpurī and seven at Mathurā. The Bhavisya P. describes the Nāgapañcami feast dedicated to the worship of the Nāgas and narrates some Nāga myths. Prince Sahasrārjuna is here said to have conquered Karkoṭaka of the Taksaka race (Todd. p. 43 note). The Nilamata P. also called Kashmir Mahātmya, makes the Nāga king Nila a kind of cultural hero of Kaśmir and propounds the doctrines that Nila imparted to the Brahmin Candradeva.

Nagas in Buddhist Literature :—In the Buddhist Sutras the Nāgas appear constantly as the protectors of Buddhism ( Samyutta V, p. 47, 63 ). They are mentioned in the Jātaka stories and are represented on the bass-reliefs as men or women either with cobra's hoods rising from behind their heads or with serpentine forms from the waist downwards. A Buddhist carving at Takhti Bāhi represents Buddha preaching to the Nagas (BI p.220-223). The Ceylonese chronicle Mahāvaṁśa records that the Stūpa at Rāmagrāma in the Kosala country, was washed away by the Ganges and the relic casket, having been carried down by the river to the ocean, was discovered by the Nāgas and presented to their king who built a Stupa for its reception ( Mahav. C. XXXI p. 185 ). This account, however, varies with that of the Chinese travellers Fa Hian and Hiuen Tsang who, about 400 and 630 A. D. respectively, saw the Stūpa at Rāmagrāma still existing being guarded by a Nāga. They further mention that Asoka attempted to remove the relics to his capital but he had to abandon the idea on the expostulation of the Nāga king. ( Beal's Fa Hian C. XXIII, p. 90; Julien's Hiuen Tsang II, 326 ). Fa Hian also mentions a Naga king Apalāla ruling in Udyāna ( Svat valley ). Hiuen Tsang mentions Na-ki-lo-ho or Nang-go-lo-ho, which is identified with Nagarahāra near Jalalabad at the confluence of the rivers Surkharud and Kabul. The name suggests that it was a settlement of the Nāgas. ( Cun. Geo. p. 483. ). In the Nepalese legend the Nāgas appear as the original inhabitants of the swamps opened up by the civilizing Manjuśri driven out by whom they took refuge in the Nāgaloka, which, to the Nepalese, is Tibet. The Tibetan records also speak of Nāgas and Nāgaloka which, in their case, is China. Mahāyāna tradition asserts that it was a Nāga king who revealed to Nāgārjuna in the Nāgaloka, the holy text of the Avataṃsaka or Kegan scripture. ( Creed of Half Japan p 10 ).

Nagas in the Jaina Puranas :—The Jaina Purānas contain many references to Nāgas or Nāgakumaras who are recognised as forming one of the ten classes of Bhavanendras or Bhavanavāsi-devas having their abode in Pātāla which is also called Nāgaloka ( HP IV, 63-65; VIII, 72 etc. ). One of them, Dharanendra Naga has been particularly associated with the twenty-third Tīrthaṅkara, Pārśvanātha whom he protected during his penances against the attack of Kamathāsura (Uttara P.; Uttarādh. p. 688 ). This is said to have taken place at Ahicchatrapura which drives its name from that event. The place is īdentified with the modern Nāgor in Jodhpur State, which is regarded as a place of pilgrimage by the Jainas. Nāgas appear to have held sway there as even the modern name of the place suggests. In the Sthānanga Sūtra ( p. 357 ) we are told that among the five commanders of king Nāgendrakumara, Rudrasena was the commander of the infantry.

Nagas in Tamil Literature :—Nāgas are mentioned even in the Tamil Sangam literature. In Nachchinarkkiniyar, for example, the Tiryar lords of Vengaḍam are connected with the Nāga princes (SIJ p. 143). Dubreil, in his Antiquities of the Pallavas, says that the Pallavas had marital relations with the Nāga princes and that there was every reason to believe that the latter came from the sea. It appears that the Tiryar of the Sangam books are identical with the Pallavas. Reviewing the Nāgakumāra story of Mallisena, ( MAR 1924 ), Dr. R. Shamasastry, referring to the fact that Nāgakumāra did not marry any Pallava princess, says that 'as the Pallavas had married Nāga princesses, the Nāgas, conforming to the Hindu custom of not exchanging daughters in marriage, might have declined to marry Pallava princesses, in return.' This, however, is not correct, for, according to our story, there was not only no ban on marrying maternal uncle's daughter but such marriages were particularly liked ( see 'Picture of palace and public life' ). The Nāgas also appear to have been in alliance with the Āndhras of the Talevaka river referred to in the Jātaka stories, and the Sendraka Nāgas were in alliance with the Kadambas. The Sātavāhanas are also said to have contracted social relations with the Nāgas ( AKJ p. 74, 82).

Nagas in Classical Sanskrit Literature :—References to Nāgas are not wanting even in Classical Sanskrit literature. Bāna in his Harsacarita mentions a Nāga king named Nāgasena at Padmāvati who lost his life by his secret being divulged by a sārikā bird. Of a particular importance are the references found in the Navasāhasānka-carita of Padmagupta a brief summary of which would not be out of place here—

Sindhurāja alias Navasāhasāṅka, king of Ujjain, once went to the Vindhya forest for sport. He was attracted very far into the forest till he came to th bank of Narmadā where he saw a Nāga princess named Śaśiprabhā daughter of Saṅkhapāla king of Bhogavati, with whom he fell in love. But the princess was soon snatched away from his company. The king, in his attempt to follow her, entered the Narmadā and through a subterranean passage emerged on the borders of the Nāgaloka. Narmadā then appeared before him in the guise of a woman and informed him that the father of the Nāga princess had taken a vow to give his daughter in marriage to one who could bring the golden lotus from a well in Ratnapuri, the city of Asuras who used to enrich themselves by raiding the territories of the Nāgas She also told him that Ratnapuri was situated at a distance of 50 gavyutis from there. The prince launched himself upon the venture. After a long journey he reached the hermitage of sage Vaṅku where he formed friendship with a Vidyādhara chief who brought armies of Vidyādharas to aid him. They reached Ratnapur which was on the way to Phanipur, and fought with the Asura king Vajrānkusa who was slain in the battle. A Nāga prince was crowned king in his place. Sindhurāja then pushed on his way to Phaṇipur where he was accorded a warm welcome by the king. The marriage then took place and Sindhurāja returned triumphantly to his capital.

This story has generally been dismissed by critics as mere legend. But it appears to me to furnish clear evidence of the existence of a ruling dynasty of Nāgas south of the Narmadā with Bhogavatī as their capital and at war with another ruling dynasty at Ratnapur against whom Sindhurāja helped them and thus won the hand of their princess. Little doubt is left in the matter when we remember that the work was written at the court, and at the instance, of king Sindhuraja himself who could not have tolerated a false account of his marital relationship with the Nāgas

Epigraphical evidence :—The evidence of Padmagupta does not stand alone. A large number of stone inscriptions discovered in the Bastar and Kawardhā States of the Central Provinces bear ample and irrefutable testimony to the existence of Nāga dynasties ruling in those parts at the time of Sindhurāja and later. The inscriptions belong to different dates between 1023 and 1349 A. D. and make mention of no less than thirty-two Nāga kings who had their capital at Bhogavati, belonged to the Viśvāmitra gotra, had a tiger with a calf as their crest and snake as their banner ensign, and worshipped the goddess Vindhyavāsini ( C. P. Ins. ). The tiger-ensign is also mentioned in the present work ( IX, 23, 7 ). The Ratnapur of Padmagupta appears to be no other than the Kalacuri capital Ratnapur which finds mention as an enemy's capital of the Nāga king Someśvara. The latter is said to have subjugated Vajra which is identified with Wairāgadha in the Chanda district. This name reminds us of the Asura king Vajrāṅkuśa mentioned by Padmagupta. The Ratnapur stone inscription of Jājalladeva mentions Ratneśa or Ratnarāja who founded Ratnapur and married the daughter of Vajjuka, the prince of Komomaṇḍala. This inscription is dated 1114 A. D. Ratnaraja is said to have lived two generations prior to Jājalladeva, thus bringing us to the time of Sindhuraja i. e. about 1005 A. D. I am, therefore, tempted to identify Vajjuka of the inscription with the Asura king Vajrāṅkuśa whom, according to Padmagupta, Sindhurāja killed in battle Thus the main events described by Padmagupta are attested to by epigraphical records of the same age.

Can we now locate Bhogavati, the ancient capital of the Nāgas ? Rai Bahadur Hiralal identifies it with Rāmateka near Nagpur where, according to him, the name is still preserved in the tradition of the Ambālā tank close to the hillock where, people aver, the Bhogavati Ganga exists. The Rāmāyana mentions Bhogavati as being on the way to Lankā ( Tatra Bhogavatī nāma sarpaṇāmālayah purī ). This description suits Rāmteka if we suppose Rāvana's Lanka to have been situated in the South. It can also suit if the Laṅkā is identified with the Amarakaṅtaka hill, but in this case we will have to suppose that Rama was travelling northwards to reach Lankā. In the Chindwārā district on the Satpurā plateau there is a low ground surrounded by hills. People call this place Pātāla-kūpa or Pātāla-koṭa. Rai Bahadur Hiralal infers from this that low lands were probably called Pātāla. I agree with this view. It must be one such Pātāla that is mentioned in the present work ( V, 12, 6 ). According to Arrian Alexander had made Pātāla his normal base. This is identified with Hyderabad Sindha by Cunningham and Bahmanābād by V. Smith. ( Cun. Geo. notes p. 691 ). It appears to me to have been another similar Pātāla. These low grounds seem to have been preferred by the Nāgas for their habitation and this is borne out by the fact that their abode is called by such words as 'Dhara-randhra,' 'Mahivivara' in the present work as well as elsewhere. "My idea is," says Rai Bahadur Hiralal "that the tract below the Satpuras down to the Godāvari, including the Nagpur and the Chanda districts, Bastar State and parts of the Raipur and Drug districts once formed the Nāga kingdom with the capital located at Bhogavati or Rāmateka which occupies a central position." At one end of the Ramateka hills is what is called Nāgārjuna hill. It has already been mentioned how Nāgārjuna is said to have acquired some of his learning from the Nāgas. The whole locality is, thus, still resounding with the echoes of the bygone Nāga supremacy and above all in the name of Nagpur in the vicinity of Rāmateka.

Conclusion :—To sum up, the references given above go to prove that—

1. The Nāgas were men of flesh and blood and not mere mythical names.

2. They had their settlements scattered practically all over India from very early times down almost to the present day, but they ceased to wield political power after the fourteenth century.

3. They had a culture of their own which appeared rather peculiar, in the early stages, to the Aryans who gradually began to associate more freely and even frequently entered into matrimonial alliances with them.

4. The present day Nāga tribes of the Nāga hills in Assam and other places probably represent the backward elements of the great Nāga race of Pauranic fame.

5. Pātāla, their chief abode, was propably a general term meaning low lands. One such abode was the southern side of the Satpuras where their traditional capital Bhogavati existed in the vicinity of the present day Nagpur.

6. The Nāgas were well known for founding great seats of learning, as for example Taxila. Another such seat appears to have existed near Nagpur where Nagarjuna, the Buddhist philosopher, had his education.

Nagaloka and the presentday Nagpur—We may now conclude that Puṣpadanta, while writing the present work about 965 A. D. at Malkhed, probably had in his mind the Nāgaloka round about Nagpur, and the falling of the hero, while yet young, in a well and his adoption by a Nāga who taught him various arts and sciences, is his allegorical and poetic description of the hero's coming to the country of the Nāgas, like Nāgārjuna, for education. Nagpur, thus, appears to have been a great seat of learning in the past and it is in the fitness of things that the present day Nagpur University has selected the snake-symbol for its coat-of-arms.

10. Analysis of the work.

I

The author begins his work with an invocation of the goddess of Speech and goes on to tell us how he was induced to write it, amongst others, by Nanna the minister of Kṛṣnarāja alias Vallabharāja of Mānyakheta. He then tells us how King Śrenika of Rajagṛha waited upon Tīrthṃkara Mahāvīra and inquired of him about the fruit of observing the fast of Śrīpañcami. The latter's disciple Gautama complied with the king's request.

Formerly there was a town named Kanakapur in the Magadha country, ruled by king Jayandhara with his wife Viśālanetra from whom he had a son named Śrīdhara. Once a merchant named Vāsava, on his return from a trade-voyage, waited upon the king with many presents amongst which was a female-portrait. This attracted the attention of the king who, on inquiry, was told that it was the picture of Pṛthvīdevī, the daughter of the king of Girinagara in Saurāṣtra who had expressed his willingness to marry her to him. On hearing this the king sent the merchant and his minister, with many presents, to Girinagara. They brought the princess to Kanakapur where the marriage was celebrated.

II

One day the king went to the pleasure garden with all the inmates of his harem. Both his queens came out with their retinue and Pṛthvīdevi was dazzled to see the splendour of her rival's entourage. Being overcome with a feeling of jealousy she went to the temple to pacify her mind. There she worshipped the Jina and learnt from sage Pihitāśrava that she was soon going to be blessed with a son. She returned to the palace feeling very happy.

In the meantime, the king, during his water-sports, discovered her absence and, on learning the facts from a servant, went in search of her, first to the temple and then to the palace. The queen had already forgotten her woes in the hopes aroused by the prophecy of the sage about which she now informed the king. Both of them then revisited the sage in order to get themselves reassured. On this occasion the sage told something more about their would-be son, i. e. the steel-gate of the temple would give way at the touch of his toe and he would fall in a well and be protected by a Nāga and fondled by the Nāginīs. In due course, the child was born. When it grew up a little the parents went out with it to the Jina temple which, to their great disappointment, they found strongly closed. Eventually the king remembered the prophecy of the sage and the gate was opened by the touch of the child's toe. While the king was engaged in worshipping the Jina and the nurses were indulging in sports in the garden, the child slipped from their hands and fell down in a well. An alarm was raised and the parents rushed to the spot. The mother even threw herself into the well. But the Nāgas prevented all injury to the child and the mother. The child was named Prajābandhura by its father and Nāgakumara by the Nāga who adopted it. The prophecy of the sage was, thus, fulfilled. When the child grew up, the Nāga took him to his home.

III.

The Nāga taught the prince various arts and sciences including politics. After his education he returned to his father. One Pañcasugandhini arrived at the palace in search of a divine lute-player who could tell the respective ages of her two daughters, Kinnari and Manohari, by observing their performance with the lute. Nāgakumāra satisfied her curiosity and won the hearts of the two girls by his skill. He later on married them by the advice of his father who said "a gem of a woman should be acquired even though stockless."

One day, Nāgak., with his wives, went to a lake for water-sports. His mother went forth to present him with garments for wearing after the bath Her rival, Viśālanetrā, saw her opportunity. Drawing the attention of the king she said "Look, my lord, your dear wife is going to her paramour." The king continued to watch the movements of the queen and when he saw her joining her son, he reprimanded Viśālanetrā for speaking ill of the virtuous lady. He, however, understood their jealousy and fearing danger to the life of Nāgak., he instructed Pṛthvīdevī not to allow her son to make any more rambles in the town. This the queen took as an insult, and, in a spirit of defiance, directly asked her son to have an elephant-ride round the capital. The king discovered the effrontery of his wife and punished her by the seizure of all her valuables. On his return Nāgak saw his mother without ornaments " like a story told by a bad poet ", and, on learning the cause of it, protested strongly in his mind and then went to the gambling house from where he returned to present his mother with a quantity of gold and jewels.

The next day, the king saw his courtiers without their usual ornaments, and on inquiry, learnt about the skill of his son at the game of dice. Being very much impressed by it, he invited his son for a game with himself and eventually lost his all to him. The prince, however, returned everything to him but secured the release of his mother's ornaments.

On another day a vicious horse was shown to the prince and the latter mastered it.

Seeing the power of Nāgak. growing every day, his elder brother, Śrīdhara, thought his chances of kingship jeopardized. So he began collecting hirelings to make short work of his rival The king was shocked to know of this. As a precautionary measure he built a separate house for Nāgak. While the latter was residing there, one day, the whole town was thrown into a tumult by the advent of a wild and ferocious elephant, Śrīdhara tried his powers against it, but all his forces were shattered by the onslaught of the mighty animal, and he himself had to run away for his very life. The king then rose up himself to meet the situation. This alarmed the queens who began to feel very anxious. Every one was looking for his own safety. At such a critical moment, Nāgak. proudly sought a commission from his father to subdue the elephant. This being readily given, the prince had a good fighting game with it till it was completely brought under control "as if the Govardhana mountain was handled by Govinda."

IV

At this time, king Jayavarmā was ruling at Northern Mathurā with his wife Jayavatī. He had two sons, Vyāla and Mahāvyāla who were 'full of knowledge and clever in fight.' One of them had an extra eye on his forehead like Śiva, and the other was extraordinarily handsome like Cupid. A sage arrived at the capital and the royal family waited upon him to listen to his religious discourse. Later, the king questioned the sage regarding the future of his sons, and was told that they both were destined to serve, the one, him at whose sight his third eye vanishes, and the other, him who marries a girl who rejects his love-advances. At this prophecy the king became disgusted with the ways of the world and became an ascetic.

While the two brothers were enjoying the kingship left to them by their father, they heard about Gaṇikāsundarī, the concubine's daughter of Śrīvarma, king of Pāṭaliputra, who was 'beautiful like Rambhā and virtuous like Sītā,' but who, all the same, had no liking for any suitor. The two brothers entrusted their kingdom to the minister's son Durvacana, and went to Pāṭaliputra. Eventually, Gaṇikāsundarī married the younger brother and the princess Surasundarī, the elder.

After a few days, while the two brothers were still in Pāṭaliputra, the town was invaded by Aridamana, the king of Gauḍa. Śrīvarma, through fear, sought to settle with his enemy by an offer of gold but the latter rejected the offer. The princess got alarmed at the danger to her father's life and expressed her fears to her husband who then prepared himself to deal with the enemy. But the younger brother took the work upon himself. He made another attempt at peace which went fruitless. The inevitable fight took place in which the enemy was vanquished.

Vyāla then took leave of his younger brother and came to Kanakapur where he lost his third eye at the sight of Nāgak. with whom he took up service.

At this time Śrīdhara made his last attempt against Nāgak. His men, commissioned to kill the rival, arrived at Nāgakumāra's residence at the door of which Vyāla was on the watch. The latter challenged them, and, in the scuffle that followed, they were all killed. Nāgak. then came out, and, on learing about the trouble, was about to march upon the enemy when minister Nayandhara met him and delivered to him the message of his father who said that though he was going to become the king of the earth, he should leave the country for the time-being to avoid a fratricidal war, and should come back when called. The prince obeyed immediately, and with his retinue and forces, he marched off to Mathura.

V

Nāgak. encamped his army outside Mathura and himself went to see the town. His entry caused a flutter amongst the cortezans one of whom even made bold to invite him. Her hospitality was accepted. He learnt from her that the king of the place had kept in confinement Sīlavatī, the daughter of Vinayapāla, king of Kānyakubja, whom he had abducted while she was being conducted to Simhapur for marriage with king Harivarma. The courtezan requested Nāgak. not to go near the place of her confinement as that was likely to bring him into trouble with the king. Nāgak. promised to abide by her wishes, but he went straight to the spot pointed out by her, Seeing him, the imprisoned princess cried out for relief. The chivalrous visitor ordered his men to take her out A fight ensued with the soldiers of Durvacana and the latter had to come out himself to take charge of the battle operations. While the fight was at its thickest, Vyāla, who was informed of the occurrence, appeared on the scene. Durvachana, recognizing in him his master, submitted and implored forgiveness. Nāgak. forgave him, addressed the relieved princess as his sister and sent her with due honour to her father.

Nāgak., one day, saw five hundred lute-masters on their way, and learnt from their chief, the king of Jālandhara, that they had been vanquished in lute-playing by Tribhuvanaratī, the daughter of king Nanda of Kaśhmir, who had taken a vow to marry him who could excel her in the art. Nāgak. asked Vyāla to entrust his kingdom once again to Durvacana, and accompany him to Kashmir where, when they arrived, they were received with honour by the king. The princess fell in love with Nāgak. no sooner than she saw him and the lute-test was also satisfied. So they were married.

One day, Nāgak. learnt from a merchant who had just returned from a trade-journey, that in the Ramyaka forest there was a three-peaked mountain at the bottom of which was a Jina temple whose steel-door would not open even by the thunderbolt of Indra.' There lived a Śabara clad in peacock-feathers and armed with a bow and arrows, who was always raising a cry of injustice. On hearing this Nāgak. went to the place with all his retinue. The door of the Jina temple opened at the touch of his hand and he saw the image of Candraprabha Tīrthamkara which he worshipped with a dance performed by his three wives. He then saw the Śabara who told him that his wife was abducted by Bhīmāsura who lived in the Kālaguhā. Nāgak. accompanied by Vyāla, entered the Pātāla and saw 'the extremely beautiful mansion of the Dānava, as he had never seen before, decorated with five-coloured banners, having designs executed in pearls and with an arch-way of fresh Kalpadruma leaves' The door-keeper did not prevent their entry and they came to the council-hall of the Asura who received him with honour and presented him with a jewel-couch and other gems. The wife of the Śabara was restored to him.

VI

Continuing his adventures in the forest, the hero entered the cave called Kañcana-guhā, pointed out to him by the Śabara. There he met the deity Sudarśanā who received him with honour and offered all the Vidyas which she had been long keeping for him. On being questioned as to how it was, the deity said that one Jitaśatru, the son of Vidyādhara Vidyutprabha of Alakapur, practised austerities there for twelve years and acquired those Vidyās. But in the meanwhile, Sage Suvrata attained omniscience in the vicinity and Jitasatru went to pay him homage. On hearing his lecture he became converted, and, according to the prophecy of the sage, instructed the Vidyas to await the advent of Nagak. On hearing this account, the hero accepted the Vidyās but asked the deity to keep them on till he required them.

Being advised by Sudarśanā, Nagak. entered another cave called Kāla-vetāla-guhā and appropriated all the wealth of Jitasatru, which was kept for him by a Vetāla. He next visited the 'tree demon-hole' where he kicked aside a wooden giant and saw the old bow of Jitaśatru. Coming out, he returned to the Jina temple and thence to his camp.

Nāgak. then marched out from there being guided by the Śabara who conducted him upto the outskirts of the forest and then returned. The hero was here visited by Vanarāja, the chief of Giriśikhara who told him that according to the prophecy of a sage, he was destined to marry his daughter Lakshmimati. He then took him home and the marriage took place.

One day Nāgak. waited upon sage Śrutidhara and inquired of him whether Vanarāja was really a man of the forest or some king who had made his home there. The sage, thereupon, told him the history of Vanarāja. In the city of Puṇdravardhana, there ruled a king of the lunar dynasty named Aparājita. He had two wives Satyavatī and Vasundharā from whom he had two sons, Atibala and Bhīmabala respectively. The king retired for penances and Bhīmabala usurped the throne driving Atibala out of the realm. The latter came and settled in that forest where he founded the town of Giriśikhara. Three generations had since passed in due succession and Somaprabha was ruling at Puṇḍravardhana and Vanarāja at Giriśikhara now.

Hearing this account, Nāgak. asked Vyala to proceed to Puṇḍravardhana immediately and get the kingdom restored to Vanarāja. Vyāla went to Puṇḍravardhana and, failing to achieve his object by peaceful persuasion, fought and defeated Somaprabha who then retired for penances. Nāgak. and Vanarāja then arrived there and the latter was crowned king.

Somaprabha, during his ascetic-tours, reached Supratiṣṭhapur and was seen by the two sons of king Vijayasiṁha, Acheya and Abheya. On learning from Somaprabha that he was vanquished by a deputy of Nāgak., they recollected a prophecy and joined Nāgak. as his servants.

VII

Leaving Lakshmīmatī with her father, Nāgak. along with his other three wives and his soldiers started for the sacred mountain Urjayant. He reached a forest-tract called Jalantī where he halted in a poisonous-mango-grove. He and his men enjoyed the mangoes without any harm. At this a Bhilla named Durmukha presented himself before the hero and expressed himself about the miracle that had been performed. The report of Nāgakumara's arrival spread from mouth to mouth and five hundred warriors came and accepted him as their master.

From there he came to Antaravana where he was received as guest by the king of Antarapur. His host received a letter from Arivarma, king of Girinagara, asking for help against Caṇḍapradyota, king of Sindhu with capital at Siṁhapur, who was contemplating an attack upon him for the sake of his daughter whom he had a desire to give in marriage only to his sister's son. The Antarapur king wanted to go there and his guest expressed a desire to accompany him "just to see how warriors fought though he himself knew nothing of wielding arms in battle". They both then marched in right military array, to Girinagara. During the battle Nāgak. and his warriors showed extraordinary valour on account of which the forces of the enemy were completely routed and Caṇḍapradyota himself was captured. In great amazement the king of Girinagara asked the king of Antarapur for information about the hero of the day, but the latter could only say that he was his guest. On learning, however, from another person that he was the son of Pṛthvīdevī and hence his own sister's son, his joy knew no bounds. They all entered the town with great jubilation and Nāgakumāra married his daughter Guṇavatī. On a subsequent day Nāgak. visited the holy mountain and worshipped it.

One day, a messenger came with a letter which purported to come from Abhicandra, king of Gajapur, imploring Nāgakumāra's help against Vidyādhara Sukaṇṭha who killed his brother Śubhacandra, king of Kauśāmbī, and, captured his seven daughters. Chivalrously responding to the call, Nāgak. besieged Alaṃghanagara the capital of Sukaṇṭha. After an exchange of bitter remarks and hard strokes Sukaṅtha was killed by Nāgak. who then released the seven princesses, installed Sukantha's son Vajrakaṇṭha on the throne and married his daughter Rukmiṇi and came to Gajapur where he married Abhicandra's daughter Candā as well as the seven princesses.

VIII

The story now turns to the adventures of Mahāvyāla whom we left at Pāṭaliputra. He enjoyed life with Gaṇikāsundari for a long time till one day he learnt from a tourer that the concubine's daughter of the Pāṇḍya king of Southern Mathura had no liking for any man. He went to Madura and was seen by the damsel on the market road. She felt affected and raised an alarm as a result of which the guards attacked the visitor who vanquished them all and killed their commander. For this he was rewarded with the hand of the damsel.

He, one day, met a traveller who told him that the princess of Ujjain did not like any man. Mahāvyāla took leave of the Pāṇḍya king, came to Ujjain and went into the palace along with other suitors on a Sunday. The princess saw him from the balcony and shook her head and said that she would not elect him, and she called him her brother. Mahāvyāla took this as a sign of his approaching evil day. He went to Gajapur, saw his elder brother, got a portrait of Nāgak. painted and returned with it to Ujjain, When he showed it to the princess, she atonce fell in love with the man painted in the picture and requested Mahāvyāla to bring that man to her if he was real flesh and blood. He then went to Gajapura once more and returned with Nāgak. who married her.

Nāgak. once asked Mahāvyāla about any wonders that he may have seen in the southern country. The latter said that the daughter of Meghavāhana, king of Meghpura in Kiskindha-Malaya, had taken a vow to fix her love upon him who could beat the tabor (Mṛdaṅga) in tune with her dance. Nāgak. went to the place, fulfilled the vow of the princess and married her.

One day, a merchant who came on a visit to his father-in-law in Meghapura waited upon the king with presents and told Nāgak. that in the Toyāvalī island there was a Jina temple and also a big bunyan tree on which he saw some maidens who complained of injustice and cried for help. They were guarded by a Vidyādhara who would not allow them to talk for long with any body. Hearing this, Nāgak. thought of the deity Sudarśanā who at once appeared and solicited orders. Nāgak. asked her for the services of some Vidyās which could conduct him over the seas and provide food. On reaching the said island, he worshipped the Jina and saw the maidens on the tree from the eldest of whom he learnt that they were the five hundred daughters of Śrīraksa, king of Bhūmitilaka who had been slain by his own sister's son Pavanavega who had imprisoned their two brothers as well as themselves as they would not consent to marry the murderer of their father. They then promised to marry Nāgak. if he could secure their release.

Nāgak. held a council and decided to help the distressed. He sent Acheya and Abheya as ambassadors to Pavanavega asking him to restore the kingdom to Raksa and Mahāraksa and leave the town abandoning his thoughts for the maidens under pain of death. The ambassy failed and a battle ensued in which Pavanavega was killed. The rest of the warriors submitted, the maidens were married and their brothers were crowned kings. Leaving them all there he returned to the Pāṇḍya kingdom.

IX.

Taking leave of the Pāndya king Nāgak. came to Dantīpura in the Āndhra country, where he was received by king Candragupta who married his daughter Madanamañjūsā to him. Leaving her there he marched on to Tribhuvanatilaka where he married Vijayandhara's daughter Lakshmimati, who won his affections very deeply. Sage Pihitāsrava happened to arrive there and Nāgakumāra listened to his long discourse on the various philosophies and religions. At the end of it Nāgak. questioned the sage as to the cause of his unbounded love for his latest wife. In answer to this the sage narrated the events of his past life. In the town of Vītaśokapura in the Airāvata country, there lived a merchant named Dhanadatta and his wife Dhanaśrī. Their son Nāgadatta married Nāgavasu, the daughter of another merchant of the same place. He took a vow to observe the fast of Śrīpañcamī on the fifth day of the month of Phālguna. The day passed off in religious worship but at the middle of the night he felt very hot and thirsty. Cooling things, such as ice, were applied to his body but his condition went on worsening. His father tried to induce him to have some refreshing drink, showing, by means of reflected lights, that it was already morning, but the hoax did not succeed. Nāgadatta died sticking to his vow as a result of which he became a god in the first heaven. Recollecting the past events, he returned to the earth and consoled his parents who were still mourning his death. They thence forward devoted themselves to religious observances and eventually attained heaven. The sage then told him that Nāgadatta was reborn in his own person as Nāgakumāra and that Lakshmīmatī was no other than his wife of the former life. The teacher then explained to him the manner of observing the fast.

At this juncture minister Nayandhara arrived from home and Nāgak. returned to Kanakapura where his father received him with great affection and crowned him king. Vyāla, at his order, brought all his wives and Vidyās from wherever they were left. With them he enjoyed the pleasures of royalty. Śrīdhara had already become a recluse through sheer disgust and now Jayandhara and Pṛthvīdevi also retired to lead an ascetic life. Nāgak. ruled the earth for a very long time and then,transferring it to Devakumāra, he along with Vyāla, Mahāvyāla,Acheya and Abheya, took to the ascetic life of a Digambara and, in due course, attained salvation.

Here ends the story of Nāgakumāra illustrating the fruit of observing the fast of Śripañcamī.

II. Language and Grammar.

The Apabhraṃśas form a very important stage in the evolution of the Aryan languages of India as they link the classics with the present day vernaculars. They did not, however, attract the attention of scholars till very late, and, it was only in 1918 that a complete and critically edited Apabhraṃśa work appeared.* This was the Bhavisayattakahā of Dhanapāla edited by Dr. Hermann Jacobi. It aroused a great interest in the direction and numerous works have since been brought to light. ‡

The earliest record of the word Apabhraṃsa in connection with language is found in the Mahābhāṣya of Patañjali (Vol. I. p. 2). But it is only in an inscription of about the middle of the 6th century A. D. ( the Vallabhi grant of Dharasena II ) that we find a definite mention of Apabhraṃśa as a language. Bhāmaha and Dandi have also accorded their recognition to it. Amongst the grammarians, the earliest to treat of this language is Canda who in his Prākṛta Lakṣaṇa devotes a few sutras to it. Hemacandra is the first who recognize the importance of this language and treat of it with a thoroughness that has not since been superseded. Later grammarians have merely copied him not only in substance but even in form and illustrations.

Hemacanda has, however, missed one point. He has omitted to notice any varieties in the language though his own treatment of it shows traces of them in the retention of the vowel sound ऋ and a few conjuncts. Namisādhu, amongst writers on poetics, and, Kramadīśvara and Mārkandeya amongst grammarians, haved named three varieties of Ababhraṃśa the former calling them Upanāgara, Ābhīra and Grāmya, and the other two Vrācata, Nāgara and Upanāgara. The language of most of the works so far discovered confirms to the rules laid down for Nāgara Apabhraṃśa which seems to have been the standard variety and to which our present work must also be said to belong. (Sanat-Intro.;Bhavis-Intro.).

Apabhraṃśa has been regarded as one of the Prākṛta Bhāṣās which include all the ancient languages other than Saṇskṛta. The most simple meaning of the word

* At least one work 'Paramātma-prakasa' of Joindu or Yogin radeva in Apabhraṃsa Dohas was published long before this, with a Hindi translation. But the text was not critically edited and it did not attract attention from outside the Jaina circles.

‡ Apabhraṃsa works that were since discovered have been noticed by me in my article 'Apabhraṃsa Literature' (AUS 1925. vol. I.). I have continued my search for this literature and have since discovered more than a dozen other works.

Prākṛta Bhāṣā seems to be 'the natural language' i. e. the language of the people unrefined by any rigid rules of grammar and rhetorics. This meaning is accepted by Vākpatirāja and Namisādhu. The latter even goes so far as to give it a status of seniority over Sanskrit, by explaining it as the first produced (Prāk kṛta). But all the Prākṛta grammarians, including Hemacandra, regard Prākṛta to be derived from Saṃskṛta (Prakṛtiḥ Saṁskṛtam, tatra bhavaṁ tata āgataṁ vā Prākṛtaṁ). It appears to me that they have done so for a practical convenience because the acceptance of Sanskrit as the source of Prakrit justifies their treatment of the language by merely explaining the deviations from the Sanskrit forms. I accept this view for the same convenience in writing the following grammatical outline of the present work.

I. Alphabet and Morphology.

§ 1. The language of the present work shows the following alphabets—

Vowels—अ आ इ ई उ ऊ ए (short) ए (long) ओ (short) ओ (long) ं (anusvāra).

Consonants—क ख ग घ । च छ ज झ । ट ठ ड ढ ण । त थ द ध न (?) प फ ब भ म । य र ल व । स ह ।

Note—The position of न is doubtful as the MSS. are very inconsistent in its use. (See Critical Apparatus).

§ 2. The remaining letters of Sanskrit are represented as follows :—

(a) ऋ by (i) अ—कय (कृत), कण्ह (कृष्ण), तण (तृण), तण्हा (तृष्णा), पयइ (प्रकृति), अड्डिमंत (ऋद्धिमन्), गहिय (गृहीत), वड्डिमअ (वृद्धिमत्), मउ (मृदु).

(ii) इ—किमि (कृमि), किव (कृपा), किवाण (कृपाण), किसाणु (कृशानु), घुसिण (घुसृण), णिव (नृप), णिव्विति (निर्वृत्ति), पिहु (पृथु), अजिंभ (अजृम्भ), मिग (मृग), मिच्चु (मृत्यु), इसी (ऋषि).

(iii) उ—वुट्ठि (वृष्टि), वुड्ढ (वृद्ध), पुसिअ (स्पृष्ट), पुच्छिअ (पृष्ट), पउत्ति (प्रवृत्ति), मुइंग (मृदङ्ग), मुअ (मृत), माउहर (मातृगृह).

(iv) ए—गेहत्थ (गृहस्थ), गेण्हिवि (गृहीत्वा).

(v) अर—हरिसिअ (हृष्ट), मरेवि (मृत्वा), पियर (पितृ), भायर (भ्रातृ).

(vi) रि—रिसि (ऋषि), रिण (ऋण), रिया (ऋचा), रिद्धि (ऋद्धि).

(b) ऐ is either (i) weakened in to ए or इ-वेरि (वैरिन्), केलास (कैलाश), इरावय (ऐरावत).

or (ii) resolved into अइ—वइस (वैश्य), सइव (शैव), वइरि (वैरिन्), दइव (दैव), गइवेय (ग्रैवेय), वइवस (वैवस्वत), अइरावय (ऐरावत), वइयायरण (वैयाकरण).

(c) औ, like ऐ, is either ( i ) weakened into ओ or उ–गोरि (गौरी), दोहित्त (दौहित्र), कोऊहल (कौतूहल), पोरिस (पौरुष), लोइय (लौकिक), कोसंबी (कौशाम्बी), कोंडिण्ण (कौण्डिन्य), गोत्तम (गौतम), ढोइय (ढौकित), सुक्ख (सौख्य), जुव्वण (यौवन), ढुक्क (ढौकित).

or ( ii ) resolved into अउ–कउल ( कौल ), गउर ( गौर ), सउच्च ( शौच ), पउलोमी ( पौलोमी ).

(d) ङ and ञ are invariably represented by an anusvāra as also the other nasals when not followed by a vowed कंकण (कङ्कन), भुयंग (भुजङ्ग), खंडिय (खण्डित), णंदण (नन्दन), संबोहिय (सम्बोधित).

(e) ष by ( i ) छ at the beginning of a word. छ (षट् ), छप्पय (षट्पद), छव्वग्ग (षड्वर्ग) but also सोलह (षोडश).

( ii ) स in other positions–कसाय (कषाय), इसी (ऋषी).

(f) श by ( i ) स–दसण (दशन), सोहा (शोभा), कोसंवी (कौशाम्बी).

( ii ) ह–दह (दश), सोलह (षोडश).

§ 3. Generally, Sanskrit words appear in Apabhraṁśa in a more or less changed form. The following are the changes that vowels undergo, besides the replacements noted in § 2.

(a) They are shortened when this can be done without affecting their syllabic quantity, i. e. before conjuncts. When a visarga is dropped the preceding vowel is lengthened i.e. अच्छरिअ (आश्चर्य), अप्पा (आत्मन्), अत्थाण (आस्थान), कित्तन (कीर्तन), खत्त (क्षात्र), खंति (क्षान्ति), कोसंबी (कौशाम्बी), गिंभ (ग्रीष्म), चुण्ण (चूर्ण), झिज्जइ (क्षीयते), वग्घ (व्याघ्र), मुक्ख (मूर्ख), मंधाय (मान्धातृ), माहप्प (माहात्म्य), महत्थ (महार्थ), कट्ठ (काष्ठ), तंब (ताम्र), दूसह (दुःसह), णीससंति (निःश्वसन्ति), णीसारहु (निःसारयत).

(b) In some cases they are entirely replaced by another vowel showing an assimilating or dissimilating tendency.

(i) without changing the syllabic quantity—

पिक्क (पक्व), गरु (गुरु), गारव (गौरव), इंगाल (अङ्गार), पुरिस (पुरुष), पोम (पद्म), पोत्थ (पुस्तक), मउड (मुकुट), उच्छु (इक्षु). पुंडु (पाण्डु), णेउर (नूपुर), गोंछ (गुच्छ).

(ii) With a change in the syllabic quantity–णिमिस (निमेष), गिहीण (ग्रहण) पायाडिअ (प्रकटित), बाहिर (बहिः), पारोह (प्ररोह).

(c) The initial अ is sometimes dropped—वलोइय (अवलोकित), वलग्ग (अवलग्न), रण्ण (अरण्य).

(d) A vowel is sometimes dropped from the middle of a word inorder to make a brief form though this involves the loss of an entire syllable ( like the words of the पृषोदरादि class in Sanskrit )—

उज्झाय (उपाध्याय), णेत्थ (नेपथ्य), धम्मुएस (धर्मोपदेश), पंचुंबर (पंचोदुम्बर), पुहवइ (पृथ्वीपति), मुद्धाई (मुग्धादेवी), जुवार (द्यूतकार).

(e) In rare cases the vowels exchange their syllabic quantity—काहणउ ( कथानक ), असीस ( आशिष् ), माणुस ( मनुष्य ).

(f) ओ is sometimes resolved into अउ like औ–पवुत्त ( प्रोक्त ), पउत्ति (प्रोक्ति).

(g) The preposition अव and अप are sometimes reduced to ओ ( by samprasāraṇa अ + उ )--ओयरिअ ( अवतरित ), ओलग्गिअ ( अवलग्न ), ओलंबिअ ( अवलम्बित ), ओसर ( अपसर ), ओहच्छामि ( अव + आसे ); but also अवहेरिअ, अवगण्णिअ, अवमाण्णिअ.

§ 4. As a rule, consonants are not tolerated in the middle of a word. But when they cannot be entirely dispensed with without affecting the constitution of a word, they are replaced by softer tones. The following changes may be noted—

(a) The unaspirated consonants except the cerebrals and र, ल are frequently eliminated, retaining their accompanying vowels alone to represent them. य or व is substituted in their place when there is the fear of a hiatus.

क and ग–लोइय ( लौकिक ), सउणि ( शकुनि ), अवलोइय ( अवलोकित ), अयाल ( अकाल ), कलयंठि ( कलकण्ठी ), दारय ( दारक ), दियंग (दिगन्त), दियंबर (दिगम्बर), भोय (भोग).

च and ज–खयर ( खचर ), रइय ( रचित ), रायउत्ति ( राजपुत्री ), गइंद ( गजेन्द्र ).

त and द–घअ ( घृत ), कइवय ( कतिपय ), कयंत ( कृतान्त ), चउक्क ( चतुष्क ), सयवत्त ( शतपत्र ), आएस ( आदेश ), उइय ( उदित ), वयण ( वदन ), आयर ( आदर ), उवहि ( उदधि ).

प–खविय ( क्षपित ), गयउर ( गजपुर ), आऊरेप्पिणु ( आपूर्य ), रूव ( रूप ), दैयावर ( दयापर ).

य and व–आउस ( आयुः ), कइंद ( कवीन्द्र ), कइ ( कवि ), जुयराअ ( युवराज ).

(b) When not eliminated as above, an attempt is made to soften them.

प to फ–फरुस ( परुष), पुप्फवइ (पुष्पवती) , पुप्फयंत (पुष्पदंत).

ट to ड–कडि (कटि), जडिअ (जटित), भडारा (भट्टारक).

ठ to ढ–कढिण (कठिन), पीढअ (पीठक).

ड, र to ल–कील (क्रीडा), वील (व्रीडा), चिलाअ (किरात), सोलह (षोडश), सोमालिया (सुकुमारिका), चलण (चरण),

(c) The aspirates of all classes except those of चवर्ग and टवर्ग are replaced by ह, ख–णह (नख), दुह (दुख), सुह (सुख).

घ–अह (अघ), णिहसण (निघर्षण).

थ–णाह (नाथ), पिहु (पृथु), जूही (यूथिका).

ध–दहि (दधि), णिहि (निधि), अहम (अधम), अहर (अधर), अहिराअ (अधिराज).

फ–मुत्ताहल (मुक्ताफल), चंपयहुल्ल (चम्पकफुल्ल).
भ–अहंग (अभङ्ग), अहिचंद (अभिचन्द), दुंदुहि (दुन्दुभि), दुल्लह (दुर्लभ), सहाव (स्वभाव).
श–दह (दश), सोलह (षोडश).

(d) म, sometimes, becomes व and Vice versa.
म to व–पणवेप्पिणु (प्रणम्य), हणुव (हनुमत), वम्मह (मन्मथ), रवण्ण (रम्य).
व to म–शमरी (शवरी).

(e) य is changed to ज–जोग्ग (योग्य), संजोय (संयोग), जण्ण (यज्ञ), जम (यम), जंत (यन्त्र), जस (यशा), जाण (यान), जोह (योध), जुयराअ (युवराज), जुयल (युगल).

§ 5. No conjuncts except of सवर्ण consonants are allowed to stand. They are dispensed with in the following ways:—

(a) A conjunct at the beginning of a word loses its second letter.—
कम (क्रम), कणंत (क्रणत्), गाम (ग्राम), चुय (च्युत), णग्गोह (न्यग्रोध), तिहुयण (त्रिभुवन), दविण (द्रविण), दिय (द्विज), पसाहण (प्रसाधन), पत्त (प्राप्त), वसण (व्यसन), वावार (व्यापार), ववहार (व्यवहार). But in case of द्वार and द्वे the initial द् is dropped-वार (द्वार), वे (द्वे).

(b) Initial स् of a conjunct consonant is dropped. If the remaining letter be क or त it is changed to ख or थ respectively. क्ष becomes ख by the same rule applied regressively (see d below) णिद्ध (स्निग्ध), थिर (स्थिर), थूल (स्थूल), खलिअ (स्खलित), खंध (स्कंध), थण (स्तन), थुअ (स्तुत), थेण (स्तेन), थी (स्त्री), खण (क्षण), खेत्त (क्षेत्र), खीर (क्षीर), खुब्भ (क्षुब्ध). But also कंधर (स्कंध) and स (स्व).

(c) Medially, conjuncts are assimilated to the second or the first i. e. progressively or retrogressively, and the preceding vowel, if long, is made short.
Prog.—कक्कस (कर्कश), कण्ण (कर्ण), कद्दम (कर्दम), कप्पूर (कर्पूर), खग्ग (खड्ग), अब्भुय (अद्भुत), कप्पद्दुम (कल्पद्रुम), किक्किंध (किष्किन्ध), सक्कारिअ (संस्कारित), कव्व (काव्य), गुप्फ (गुल्फ), मज्जार (मार्जार), मग्ग (मार्ग), सुक्क (शुष्क), सुट्ठु (सुष्ठु), मुग्ग (मुद्ग), जुत्त (युक्त), गुत्ति (गुप्ति).
Reg.—अग्ग (अग्र), जोग्ग (योग्य), सुक्क (शुक्र), सुक्क (शुक्ल), सुत्त (सूत्र), खट्टा (खट्वा), कस्सीर (कश्मीर), खुब्भ (क्षुब्ध), अद्धक्ख (अध्यक्ष), गम्म (गम्य), (d) Sibilants, when assimilated, frequently make the second letter aspirated. (See b above).

पसत्थ (प्रशस्त), अणत्थमिअ (अनस्तमित), कुत्थिय (कुत्सित), पच्छइ (पश्चात्), अच्छरिअ (आश्चर्य), तुरुक्ख (तुरुष्क), पुप्फ (पुष्प), णिप्फंद (निष्पन्द) वत्थ (वस्त्र), but णिप्पह (निष्प्रभ).

(e) Conjuncts may be separated by the intervention of a vowel (Svara-bhakti).
कसण (कृष्ण), करिसण (कर्षण), किरिया (क्रिया), दरिसिय (दर्शित), वरिस (वर्ष), सुक्किल (शुक्ल), पउम (पद्म), छउमत्थ (छद्मस्थ), अच्छारिअ (आश्चर्य), तंबिर (ताम्र), सिरि or सिय (श्री), दुवार (द्वार).

(f) A conjunct may be simplified and the preceding vowel nasalised.

जंपइ ( जल्पति ), वंकाणण ( वक्रानन ), दंसण ( दर्शन ), विंभिय ( विस्मित ), अंसु (अश्रु), फंस ( स्पर्श ), गिंभ ( ग्रीष्म ), विंभल ( विह्वल ), साहंमिय ( साधर्मिन् ).

(g) Some conjuncts have special substitutes—

क्ष्--ख्, घ् , छ्, or झ, अद्धक्ख ( अध्यक्ष ), पच्चक्ख ( प्रत्यक्ष ), घित्त ( क्षिप्त), छण इंदु ( क्षण + इन्दु ), झीण ( क्षीण ), झरंत ( क्षरत् ), झिज्जइ ( क्षीयते ).

ग्ध्--ज्झ्, डज्झ ( दग्ध ).

ज्ञ--ण् or ज्ज् , आण ( आज्ञा ), पइज्ज ( प्रतिज्ञा ).

त्य्--च्, चाय ( त्याग ), भिच्च ( भृत्य ), णिच्च ( नित्य ), असच्च ( असत्य ).

त्स्--च्छ्, वच्छर ( वत्सर ). मच्छर ( मात्सर्य ), वच्छल्ल ( वात्सल्य ).

द्य्--ज्, जूअ ( द्यूत ), अज्जु ( अद्य ).

ध्य् or ध्व--झ, झाण ( ध्यान ), जुज्झइ (युध्यते), अज्झासा (अध्याशा), विज्झइ (विध्यते) उज्झाय ( उपाध्याय ), झुणि ( ध्वनि ).

प्स्—च्छ्, अच्छरहु (अप्सरसाम्).

स्त्—ख् , खंभ (स्तम्भ).

स्थ्—ठ्, ठविय (स्थापित), ठाण (स्थान), अट्ठि (अस्थि), विसंठुलिय (विसंस्थुलित).

स्म्—भ्, स् or म्ह्, विंभिय (विस्मित), सरइ (स्मरति), अम्हहं (अस्माकम्).

ष्ण्—ट्ठ or ण्ह्, विट्ठु (विष्णु) तिट्टि (तृष्णि or तृष्णा), कण्ह (कृष्ण), तुण्हिक्क (तूष्णीक).

ष्ट्र—ढ्, दाढा (दंष्ट्रा).

ह्व—भ्, विंभल (विह्वल).

§ 6. A consonant is sometimes doubled either to retain the syllabic quantity of the preceding vowel which is shortened, or to raise the quantity for the first time.

परज्जिय (पराजित), अवयण्णिअ (अवगणित), गोत्तम (गौतम), उप्परि (उपरि), अण्णेक्क (अनेक).

II. Noun.

§ 7. The following are the case terminations for masculine nouns ending in अ. The ending vowel of the base is dropped before terminations beginning with a vowel.

There are only two numbers, singular and plural, the dual being included in the latter.

| | 1Nom. | 2Acc. | 3Inst. | 4Dat. | 5Abl. | 6Gen. | 7Loc. | 8Voc. |

| Sing. | उ, ओ. | उ. | ए,एण, एणं. | हो, हु,आसु. | हो, हु.आउ. | स्स, सु,आसु, हो, हु. | इ, ए,अइं. | अ. |
| Plu. | अ | अ, ए. | एहिं. | हिं. हुं. | हुं | हं | हिं, हं | |

NOUN

Examples.

Nom.—Sing. णरु, पुत्तु, भडु, भडो, सप्पो, दप्पो.
Plu. णर, भड, अरहंत, पंचत्थिकाय, णंदण, हयवर, गयवर.

Acc.—Sing. भोयराउ महइ ( I, 10, 8. ), अप्पाणु ण लिप्पइ ( I, 10, 9 ).
Plu. ण वि दावइ उज्जल वि दंत, सुमरइ मुणिवर संत दंत ( I, 10, 11 ), पुरमाणव चूरइ ( III, 15, 10. ), भडे हए, गए, रहे, ( VI, 13, 11. )

Ins.—Sing. अत्थें, गुणधम्में, भावें, भिच्चें, जणेण, सोहणेण, सुहिं (सुखेन), खणिं (क्षणेन), जसेणं.
Plu. सुरवरेहिं, लोयणेहिं, किंकरेहिं, कुंकुमेहिं, भायरेहिं.

Dat.—Sing. णविवि णरिंदहो ( I, 8, 12 ); धीयउ कंदप्पहो दिण्णउ ( III, 7, 16 ) ; कहियं णरणाहहो ( III, 13, 2 ), रायहो दाविय ( III, 8, 16 ); सव्वंगु णविउ परमेसरासु ( IV, 13, 9 ).
Plu. वाणिज्जहिं गउ ( I, 15, 5 ).

Abl.—Sing. धीर वि णर णट्ठा रणे णायहो, जलहितरंग णाइं गिरिरायहो ( III, 16, 8 ), तें कड्डिय सा सुंदरि घराउ, णं करिणा करिणि महासराउ ( VIII, 2, 10. ), पंथहो णोसरियउ ( IV, 13, 6 ). सग्गहो पडियउ.
also केलासहो होंतउ ( III, 15, 13. ), विजयाउरु धाइएण ( IV, 7, 14. ).

Gen.—Sing. रायस्स, णायस्स दणुयस्स, मणुयस्स, जयंधरासु ( I, 15, 12 ), णरणाहहो अरिछव्वग्गहु.
Plu. मंडलियहं, दुट्ठहं, मणुयहं, दीणहं, माणुसहं.

Loc.—Sing. सग्गि, णरि, जणे, णरे, णरकोट्ठइं ( I, 12, 1. ).
Plu. तरंगहिं ( III, 8, 7 ), खेत्तहं पयसंचारु णत्थि ( I, 13, 6 ) दियंतहिं.

Voc.—Sing देव, परमेसर, हे पुत्त.

It will be seen that it is, strictly speaking, the genitive which is mostly used to express the sense of the dative and ablative. It is even used sometimes to denote the acc. and the inst. e. g.

Acc. आयउ वणकरिंदु कणयउरहो ( III, 15, 13 ).
मा जाएसहि रायदुवारहो ( V, 2, 7 ).
सव्वहं पाडमि जमदंडघाउ ( IV, 9, 2 ).

Inst. मणु मणहो मिलिउ करु करहो मिलिउ ( I, 18, 9 ).

§ 8. The declension of neuter nouns ending in अ differs from the masc. in Nom. and Acc. plural only which in their case is formed by adding अइं or आइं, e. g. धण्णइं, तणाइं, गोहणाइं, पाणियाइं (Nom. I, 6, 5). पयाइं दिंति, विण्णाणइं संभरंति, लक्खणइं दक्खवंति (Acc. I. 1 ).

Gender is, however, very loose and arbitrary as words like परियणाइं, किंकराइं, मायासुयइं, दीणइं. दारयाइं are also used in neuter forms.

§ 9. Masc. nouns ending in इ or उ are few. Those ending in इ are mostly those that are obtained by dropping the last consonant, e. g. करि, ससि, केसरि, वणि.

| Termi. | Examples |
|---|---|
| Nom. & Acc. Nil-- | हत्थि ण होइ ( III, 16, 11 ), मुणि वंदिवि (I,12, 1 ), जहिं कमलरेणुपिंजरिय हत्थि (plu. I, 6, 4 ), पहु सरइ थुणइ (I, 11, 2). पणवेप्पिणु पंचगुरु (I, 1, 1 ). |
| Inst. sing. णा | गुणिणा, वणिणा, पहुणा. |
| plu. हिं | गुणीहिं, रयणकोडिहिं. |
| Gen. sing. हुं, हे | णियगुरुहुं, वइरिहुं, पहुहे. |
| plu. हिं | जिणमुणिहिं मणु रावइ. |
| Loc, sing. हे, हि | सुरगिरिहे ( I, 3. 14 ), उययगिरिहि ( I, 8, 8 ). |

§ 10. There are no nouns ending in a consonant as all such nouns of Sanskrit are made to end with a vowel अ or इ by dropping the last consonant, as हणुव, सिर, उर, तम, करि, ससि, वणि; or by adding an अ at the end, as आउस ( आयुस् ).

§ 11. Feminine nouns ending in आ are generally shortened and those ending in इ or ई are undistinguished.

| Termi. | | Examples. |
|---|---|---|
| Nom. and voc. | Sing. Nil | णिद्द, भुक्ख, वाय, कंत, मुंडमाला, सेलिंदबाला, देवि, मणोहरि, कुलउत्ती, भोइणि, भंडारी, सलिलकील पारद्ध कुमारि (III, 8, 4). |
| | Plu. अउ, आउ, इउ, ईउ | एंतु पियाउ(III,7,13),महिलउ णउ मुणंति सहियत्तणु (III,11,3), धीयउ कदप्पहो दिण्णउ (III,7,16.), पंच वि गईउ etc. ( I,12,3 ), हारावलिउ, किंकिणिउ, विलासिणिउ, तिण्णि वि महएविउ (V, 11, 12). |
| Inst. | Sing. इ, ए | हंसलीलाइ, दाढाइं,मुद्धए, कण्णए, जयमईए, अण्णेकए, बालियाए, पहुभत्तिए, कंतीए, पउलोमीए मरगयरुईए, वसुमईए. |
| | Plu. हिं | धीयहिं, घरिणिहिं, करिणिहिं, देविहिं, हारावलिहिं, कामिणिहिं, बहिणिहिं. |
| Gen. | Sing. हे | कंतहे, धीयहे, मायहे, सुंदरिहे, जणणिहे, पुत्तिहे, गच्छंतिहे, |
| | Plu. हं, हुं, आण | अच्छरहुं,महिलहं,जुवइहुं,विलयाण लक्खाइं (II,2,9). |
| Loc. | Sing. इ, हे | दिसि (I, 6, 3), कुसुममंजरिहे (II, 1, 9). |

III. Pronoun.

§ 12. Personal pronouns—

| | Nom. | Acc. | Inst. | Dat. | Gen. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| I Person:—Sing. | हउं | मइं | मइं | महु | मज्झ, मज्झु, महु, महारउ, मेरउ. |

| III Person Fem. Sing. | सा | | तीए, ताइं | तहे, ताह | तहे, ताह. |
| Plu. | ... | ... | ... | ... | ... |

§ 13. Demonstrative, interrogatory and relative pronouns—

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| एतत् Masc. Sing. | एउ, एहु, एहउ. f. एही | एहु | अणेण ... | ... ... | एयहु. |
| Plu. | एए | | | | |
| किम् Masc. Sing. | कवणु | | कें, किं | ... | कासु. कहिं Loc. |
| Fem. „ | का | | काइं | | काहे |
| यत् Masc. Sing. | जो | जं | जें, plu. जेहिं | ... | जसु, जासु. |
| Fem. „ | जा | | | | |

IV. Numerals.

§ 14. The following numerals are found mentioned in the present work—

| cardinal | ordinal | cardinal | ordinal |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 इक्क, एक्क | पहिलउ | 11 एयारह | |
| 2 दुअ, बे, बिण्णि | दूयउ, बीयउ | 12 बारह, दुवालस, दोदह | बारहम |
| 3 तइ°, तिण्णि | तइयउ | 14 चउदह | |
| 4 चउ°, चत्तारि | चउत्थ, चोत्थ | 16 सोलह | सोलहम |
| 5 पंच | पंचम | 18 अट्ठारह | |
| 6 छ | छट्ठम | 21 एक्कवीस | एक्कवीसम |
| 7 सत्त | सत्तम | 22 बावीस | बावीसम |
| 8 अट्ठ | अट्ठम | 32 बत्तीस | |
| 9 णव | णवम | 33 तेतीस | तेतीसम |
| 10 दह | दहम | 50 पण्णास | |
| | | 68 अट्ठसट्ठि | |
| | | 100 सय | |
| | | 1000 सहस | |
| | | 100000 लक्ख | |
| | | 10000000 कोडि | |

V. Nominal suffixes.

The suffixes that are found used are mostly common to other Prakrits—

§ 15.-In the same sense ( स्वार्थे )—

अल्ल—णवल्ल

इल्ल—सुदंसणिल्ल

उल्ल—असणुल्ल, अहरुल्ल, कडउल्ल, करहुल्ल, कलणुल्ल, कमलुल्ल, गंडयलुल्ल, जरुल्ल, जुयलुल्ल, भवणुल्ल, मडहुल्ल, मंडउल्ल, मांसुल्ल, रुहिरुल्ल, सिरकमलुल्ल, हियउल्ल, हेमवण्णुल्ल.

§ 20. For forming comparative and superlative adjectives—

(i) Comparative :--

आर--गरुयारी, लहुयारी, भल्लारउ ( भद्रतरः ), पियारउ ( प्रियतरः ), पहिलारउ ( प्रथमतरः ).

इय ( ईयस् )--बलियउ.

(ii) Superlative :--

इट्ठ--पाविट्ठ ( पापिन् + इष्ठ ).

VI. Verb.

There is no distinction of Atmanepada and Parasmaipada and the dual merges in the plural.

§ 21. Present tense.

| | Terminations. | Examples. |
|---|---|---|
| I Per. Sing. | उं, मि | करउं, कहउं, जामि, पहणमि, पलोयमि, जिणमि. |
| Plu. | हुं, मो | अवयरहुं, णिवसामो. |
| II Per. Sing. | सि, हि | होसि, घिवसि, जाणहि, हिंडहि. |
| III Per. Sing. | इ | भमइ, भक्खइ, हवइ, कहइ, सहइ, सक्कइ. |
| Plu. | अंति | जिणंति, जुज्झंति, डहंति, पडंति, कहंति, मुयंति, लब्भंति. |

§ 22. Past tense.

Past tense is almost exclusively expressed by participles. The only example of verb that I can pick out is आसि ( आसीत् ) in आसि रिसिहिं वक्खाणियउ VI, 8, 11.

§ 23. Future tense.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| I Per. Sing. | एसमि | परिणेसमि. |
| II Per. Sing. | एसहि | णिवडेसहि, पेक्खेसहि, जाएसहि. |
| III Per. Sing. | एसइ | कीलिसइ, जणेसइ, णिवडेसइ, होसइ. |
| Plu. | इहिंति | करिहिंति, भुंजिहिंति. |

§ 24. Imperative Mood.

| II Per. Sing.--अ, इ, उ, ए, सु, हि. | जय, धरि, सुणि, कहि, करि, भणु, चडु, हणु, पेक्खु, करे, (IX, 17, 25), भणसु, जिणसु, कहसु, सरसु, कहहि, डहहि, पेसहि. |
| Plu.--हु, | णीसारहु, मारहु, कड्ढहु, परितायहु. |
| III Per. Sing.--उ | संभवउ, होउ, वियलउ, किज्जउ, पसियउ. |
| Plu.--अंतु | एंतु. मेल्लंतु. |

§ 25. Potential mood.

This is expressed by passive forms.

III. Per. sing. ज्जइ--विरइज्जइ, पाविज्जइ ( III, 2, 14).
णासिज्जइ, संनोसिज्जइ ( III, 3, 10 ).

§ 26. Passive voice.

II. Per. Sing. हि--दीसहि.

III. Per. sing. ज्जइ--किज्जइ, मुणिज्जइ, दिज्जइ, लइज्जइ, णासिज्जइ, डज्झइ; other forms-दुब्भइ, दीसइ, मुच्चइ, सुम्मइ (श्रूयते).

Plu. अंति--हम्मंति (हन्यन्ते), दीसंति (दृश्यन्ते), जिप्पंति (जीयन्ते).

§ 27. Roots ending in आ change it to ए before the terminations of the present and imperative e. g. देइ (दाति), लेइ (लाति), लेंति, देहि, लेहि.

§ 28. Intensive (भृशार्थे). जजाहि (go quickly), देदेहि (give quickly).

§ 29. Denominative. रंडमि (रंडां करोमि), बहिरिउ (बधिरीकृत), वंकावइ (वक्रीकरोति), हक्कंत (हक्, चोदनार्थं शब्दं, कुर्वत).

VII Participles and Infinitives.

Terminations — Examples

§ 30. Present Active ( i ) अंत--कीलंत, सुणंत, संत, सरंत, चयंत, fem. हिंदोलंती, पडंती.

(ii) माण--गच्छमाण, णच्चमाण, पइसमाण, चोयमाण (IV, 12, 11),

Present Passive — थिप्पमाण, गुप्पमाण, सेविज्जमाण, संचिज्जमाण.

§ 31. Past Passive अ, ण्ण.--भूसिअ, दमिअ, हुअ, धरिअ कहिअ, आरूढ, दिण्ण, विच्छिण्ण, भिण्ण, fem. गय, णिय, पिहिय, दिट्ठा, हुई.

Causal आविय--दरिसाविअ, देवाविय, पट्ठविअ.

§ 32. Past absolute (i) इवि, एवि--भणिवि, मण्णिवि, रुंभिवि, पेक्खिवि, वंदिवि परिणिवि, लहेवि, लग्गेवि, लेवि.

(ii) इय--पेसिय ( III, 11, 9 ).

(iii) ऊण--बुज्झिऊण, भज्जिऊण, अहऊण, चईऊण.

(iv) एविणु,--लेविणु.

एप्पिणु--लएप्पिणु, आणेप्पिणु, भमेप्पिणु, साहेप्पिणु.

(v) पि--गंपि ( III,12, 9 ).

(vi) णमुल--सव्वहं पाडमि जमदंडघाउ ( IV, 9, 9 ).
( यमदण्डघातं, यमदण्डेन हत्वा, पातयामि ).

§ 33. Potential एवअ--वंचेवअ, करेवअ, जाएवअ, जोएवअ, दारेवअ, मारेवअ, हणेव्वअ.

§ 34. Infinitive (i) इवि--कड्ढिवि ( VII, 6, 2 ).

(ii) उं--दाउं ( दातुम् V, 10, 8 ).

(iii) हुं--जिणहुं, जोयहुं, दिज्जहुं, सिक्खहुं, मेल्लवहुं.

VIII. Verbal derivatives.

The numerous nouns derived from verbs in Sanskrit occur here with the usual phonetic changes e. g. णंदण, विलासिणि, तायण ( त्राण ) etc. The following are, however, noteworthy—

§ 35. In the sense of habit ( ताच्छील्य ).

इर--उज्झिर, घोलिर, णिहालिर, पयंपिर, परताविर, पलयासंकिर, बुज्झिर, भासिर, संताविर, विलंबिर, हिंसिर.

§ 36. In the sense of agent ( कर्तरि ).

आर--दायार ( दातृ ).

एर--जणेरी ( जनयित्री, जननी ).

IX. Indeclinables.

§ 37. Adverbs of time--चिरु ( चिरम् ), झत्ति ( झटिति ), जाम-ताम ( यावत्-तावत् ), ता, तो (तावत्), लहु, लहु ( लघु, शीघ्रम् ), पच्छइ (पश्चात्), अज्जु (अद्य), अज्जु परए ( अद्य श्वो वा ), जइयहुं-तइयहुं ( यदा-तदा ), तओ ( तदा ), संपइ ( सम्प्रति ), णिच्च ( नित्यम् ), सया ( सदा ).

§ 38. Adverbs of place--इत्थु, एत्थु ( अत्र ), तित्थु, तेत्थु ( तत्र ), जहिं, जेत्तहे ( यत्र ), तहिं, तेत्तहे ( तत्र ), कहिं ( कुत्र ), पुरउ ( पुरः ), सवडंमुहु ( सन्मुखम् ).

§ 39. Adverbs of manner--एम ( एवम् ), केम ( किम् ), कह व ( कथमपि ), किह ( कथम् ), जिह-तिह ( यथा-तथा ).

§ 40. Interjections, conjunctions and other particles--अव्वो ( अहो ), हा, भो, अह ( अथ ), अहवा ( अथवा ), इव, व, व्व, वा (इव), णं ( ननु ), ण, णउ (न), णवर ( केवलम् or अनन्तरम् ), णिरुह, णिरारिउ, णिरुत्तउ ( नितराम्, निश्चयम् वा ), किर ( किल ), च्चिय ( चैव ), जइ-तो ( यदि-तर्हि ), छुडु ( यदि ), णाइ, णावइ, विव ( इव ), विणु ( विना ), पुणु ( पुनः ), मि, व, वि ( अपि ), मा, मं ( मा prohibitive ), सहुं ( सह ), सइं ( स्वयम् ), ईसीसि ( ईषद् ईषद् ), उवरि, उप्परि ( उपरि ).

X. Onomatopoeia.

§ 41. Our work is particularly rich in the use of onomatopoetic words, which mostly occur in the description of the battle scenes.

कडयडंति ( cracking of bones ), कणरणंति ( jingling of anklets ), कसमसंति ( breaking of spears ), किलकिलंति ( bursting into laughter ), खणखणंति and खुणखुणंति ( clashing of swords ), गुमुगुमुगुमंत ( humming of bees ), चलचलंति ( sound of the entrails ), चलवलंत ( fluttering of banners ), जिगिजिगिजिगंत ( splashing of swords ), झणझण ( rumbling of paddy-ears ), झलझलइ ( ruffling of the sea ), झंकार ( humming of bees ), टंकार or टणटणटणंत ( sound of bell ), टलटलइ ( shaking of the mountain ), दडयडंति ( tumbling of trunks of dead soldiers ), धगधगंति ( sound of swords waved forcefully in the air ), भुक्किउ ( braying of asses ), धाह ( cry of lamentation ), रणझणंत ( sound of bell ), रुणरुण ( humming of bees ), ललललंति (waving of chawries), सलसलंति ( flowing of blood ), हिलिहिलि ( neighing ), थरहर ( trembling ).

12. Metre.

The author has divided the present work into nine sandhis (chapters) each of which consists of a number of kadavakas (passages) the longest sandhi (IX) containing twenty-five and the shortest (V) only thirteen. A Kadavaka forms the metrical unit of Apabhramśa poetry. It is constituted by a number of lines each of which consists of two padas or feet rhyming with each other, and ending with a verse called 'ghatta' the measure of which changes only with the chapter at the very beginning of which it is defined by means of a verse called 'dhruvaka' so named because it remains the same throughout the chapter. This arrangement corresponds with that of some of the most important poems in Hindi such as the Ramayaṇa of Tulsidasa or the Padmavata of Malika Muhammada Jayasi, where a number of lines in 'caupai' metre ends with a 'doha' or 'soratha' verse, the passage forming the unit of the whole work. The kaḍavakas, sometimes, have a couplet in the 'duvai' metre at the beginning as in sandhis III and IV of our work. The usual length of a kaḍavaka is twelve or thriteen lines, though the longest in our work runs to forty-six (IX, 17) and the shortest shows eight only (VII, 12). The total number of kaḍavakas in all the sandhis is 150 (one hundred and fifty) containing, in all, 2205 (two thousand two hundred and five) lines, besides the one kaḍavaka of sixteen lines and the following six verses at the end of the work constituting the author's praśasti.

Five lines, in all, are defective in our text (I, 3, 8; IV, 15, 8; V, 9, 8; IX, 25, 4, 6) as their second foot is missing It is possible that the poet himself left them incomplete by over-sight as in each case the defective line occurs in continuation of many similarly rhyming feet. Another explanation is that the missing feet may have been overlooked by the earliest scribe who copied the archetype, and so they could not find their way in to any of the later MSS. It is also not impossible that they be later interpolations meant to complete or amplify the descriptions which may have seemed insufficient to their author. As already said in the description of the MSS., some lines are found in one or two of them only, and our work may not be absolutely free from interpolations (see notes on VI, 12, 4) Let us, however, hope that the missing feet may yet be recovered from MSS. that might be discovered in future.

Prakrit metre is divided into two kinds according as the measure depends upon the number of syllables ( vaṇa-vṛtta ) or on the syllabic quantity ( matra-vṛtta ) Indirectly, our poet has told us more than once that he was writing his poem in mātra metre ( 'Bhoyaṇu bhuttau mattā-juttau Sarasu kaindeṃ kavvu va uttau'. V, 2, 4 ; and Kavvaṃ piva mattā-saṃvariyaṃ.' VI, 9, 5 ). He has, however not neglected the other kind entirely. But whatever the metre used, rhyme ( pādānta-yamaka ) is the essence of all. The metre that predominates in our work consists of two feet of sixteen mātrās each, rhyming with each other and having only the last few syllabic instants well regulated. Variations in these regulations furnish varieties of metre.

The following is a brief statement of the metres and the total number of kaḍavakas in which they are used—

| Matra vrtta | | Varṇa-vrtta | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Alillaha | 60 | Saṃkhaṇārī | 3 | |
| Pajjhatikā | 47 | Pramāṇikā | 1 | |

| „ | 4 | Madhubhāra (? ) | It has eight mātrās in each foot ending with two short. But as defined in PP. page 284, it requires a payodhara ( Ja-gaṇa ) at the end. |
| „ | 5 | Dīpaka | ( See above ). |
| „ | 10 | Pādākulaka | The 16 mātrās in each foot end with two long, with the exception of four lines ( 10, 13, 16. 17 ) which end with one long ( see above ). |
| VI | 1-5, 7-12, 14; 15, 17, | Pādākulaka | It has 16 mātrās in each foot ending with a long ( see above ). |

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| VI | 6 | Madhubhāra (?) | It has eight mātrās in each foot ending with a long ( see above ). |
| " | 13 | Saṃkhaṇārī | ( See above ). |
| " | 16 | Samānikā | A syllabic metre of eleven syllables in each foot alternately long and short ( PP. page 372 ). |
| VII | 1–4, 6–12, 14, 15. | Alillaha | ( See above ) Expections :–1, 7 8, 9 ; 2, 7 ; 3, 1, 7; 4,2, 4; 8, 6 ; 11, 1, 2, 3 ; 12, 1, 2 ; 14, 15, 8 ; 15, 5, 6, 7, 9. These twenty lines end with a long mātrā and therefore, belong to Pādākulaka '(see above ). |
| " | 5 | Dīpaka | ( See above ). |
| " | 13 | Mañjutilakā | It has twenty mātrās in each foot with the scheme one short followed by a Ta-gana, at the end, except line 7 where the feet end with a Na-gana. The measure could not be traced in the Prākṛta Piṅgala, but it is illustrated in the Chandah-prabhākara. p. 55, where, however, it shows a Ja-gaṇa at the end. |
| VIII | 1–16 | Pajjhatikā | ( See above ). Exceptions :—1, 6, 7 ; 3, 12 ; 4, 8 ; 6, 3, 12 ; 14 ; 7, 2, 8 ; 9, 8 ; 10, 2 ; 12, 2 ; 13, 3 ; 15, 2, 4, 10, 12. These 17 lines end with a Na-gaṇa and hence are Alillaha. |
| IX | 1–15 ; 19, 22–25. | Alillaha | ( See above ) Expections :—1, 11 ; 4, 10 ; 6, 3 ; 7. 7 ; 9, 8 ; 10, 11 ; 11, 1, 2 ; 12, 3, 5 ; 22, 2, 5. These twelve lines end with a long mātrā and hence are Pādākulaka. |
| " | 16 | Mottiyadāma | A syllabic metre of twelve syllables in four Ja-ganas in each foot ( PP. page 451 ). |
| " | 17 | Saṃkhaṇārī | ( See above ). |
| " | 18 | Pādākulaka | It shows Ra-gaṇa at the end of each foot of 16 mātrās ( see above ). |
| " | 20 | Mañjutilakā | It has twenty mātrās in each foot with a long and short at the end, with the exception of lines 8 and 14 where we get a Na-gaṇa. See VII, 13, above. |

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| „ 21 | Mālatī | A syllabic metre of six syllables of two Jagaṇa in each foot (PP. page 370). It is half of Mottiyadāma (see above). |
| Praśasti | Alillaha | (See above). |

II. Ghatta verses.

| Sandhi | Metre | Nature of the metre, etc. |
|---|---|---|
| I | Ullāla | It has twenty mātrās in either line with a caesura at the 15th. (PP. page 205). |
| II | Caupaiā | It has thirty mātrās in either line of which the first two parts of 10 and 8 mātrās have a caesura, and rhyme with each other. (PP. p. 167). |
| III | (?) | It has 23 mātrās in either line with a caesura at the 9th. It could not be traced in PP. |
| IV | Caupaiā | (See above). |
| V | Caubolā | It has thirty mātrās in either line like Caupaiā, but here the line is broken up into two feet of 15 mātrās each, rhyming with each other. It could not be traced in PP.but is found in Chandahprabhākara p.47. |
| VI | Digapāla | It has 24 mātrās in either line broken up into two feet of 12 mātrās each rhyming with each other. It is not found in. Prakṛta Pingala but is illustrated in Chandah prabhākara p. 62. |
| VII | Saṃpadā | It has 23 mātrās in either line like that in chap III,but here the caesura comes at the 11th mātrā. It could not be traced in PP. but is illustrated in the Chandahprabhākara p. 60. |
| VIII | Ghattā | It has 31mātrās in either line with the first two parts of 10 and 8 having a caesura and rhyming with each other. (PP. page 170). |
| IX | Culiālā | It has 29 mātrās in either line with a caesura at the 13th. (PP. page 274). |
| Praśasti | Culiālā | (See above). |

III. Duvai verses.

A Duvai verse occurs at the beginning of each kaḍavaka in Sandhis III and IV. It has twenty-eight mātrās in either line with a caesura at the 16th. and a long mātrā at the end, (PP. page 259.)

IV. Miscellaneous.

At VI, 10, 1-2 we have a gāthā having 30 mātras in the first line and 27½ in the second with a caesura at the 12th in either. (PP.p.108).

At VI, 10, 3-4 we have a Sanskrit verse in Vanśastha metre. Its last foot is, however, 'Upendravajrā'.

At the end in the Praśasti, we have six 'Gāthā' verses as in VI, 10, 1-2, except that the second line of verses 2 and 5 has 30 mātrās instead of 27.

13. The gloss and its authorship.

It has been mentioned in the description of the MSS. that three of them bear glosses ( tippaṇa ) on the margin. These are more numerous and elucidative in D specially at the beginning of the work. It may appear that these notes were made by some readers or students of the MSS. according to the explanations of their teacher. But most of the notes are identical in all the three MSS. Sometimes they even agree in making a common mistake and in a few cases the same note has been shown to refer to different adjacent words. The only conclusion that can be drawn from these facts is that the makers of the MSS. copied the notes from a common source and that they are mainly the work of a single author. Who is this author? A clue to his identification is furnished by a note in MS. D. on सरजाइभेय, III, 6, 4. There we are told–सरजाइभेय षड्जातःया अष्टादश महापुराणटिप्पणके व्याख्याता । The gloss-maker, in my opinion, means to say here that he had already explained the eighteen jātis of music in his glosses on the Mahāpurāṇa. Now, we have a gloss on the Mahāpurāṇa of Puspadanta which is found on the margin of some MSS of the Mahāpurāna as well as on independent MSS. I have seen two MSS. containing the glosses on the Ādipurāna and the Uttarapurāṇa respectively, from which I take the following extracts :—

The Ādipurāṇa tippaṇa begins—

प्रणम्य वीरं विबुधेन्द्रसंस्तुतं निरस्तदोषं वृषभं महोदयम् ।
पदार्थसंदिग्धजनप्रबोधकं महापुराणस्य करोमि टिप्पणम् ॥

It ends—

समस्तसंदेहहरं मनोहरं प्रकृष्टपुण्यप्रभवं जिनेश्वरम् ।
कृतं पुराणे प्रथमे सुटिप्पणं सुखावबोधं निखिलार्थदर्पणम् ॥

इति श्रीप्रभाचन्द्रविरचितमादिपुराणटिप्पणकं पञ्चाशत्–श्लोकहीनसहस्रद्वयपरिमाणं परिसमाप्तम् ॥

The Uttarapurāṇa ends—

तत्त्वाधारमहापुराणगमनद्योती जनानन्दनः
सर्वप्राणिमनःप्रभेदपटुताप्रस्पष्टवाक्यैः करैः ।
भव्याब्जप्रतिबोधकः समुदितो भूभृत्प्रभाचन्द्रतः
जीयाट्टिप्पणकः प्रचण्डतरणिः सर्वार्थमग्नद्युतिः ॥

श्रीजयसिंहदेवराज्ये श्रीमद्धारानिवासिना परापरपरमेष्ठिप्रणामोपार्जितामलपुण्यनिराकृताखिलमलकलंकेन श्रीप्रभाचन्द्रपण्डितेन महापुराणटिप्पणके शतत्रयाधिकसहस्रत्रयपरिमाणं कृतामिति ।

From these extracts we learn that the author of the Mahāpurāṇa-ṭippaṇa was Prabhācandra Pandit, a resident of Dhārā who wrote during the reign of Jayasiṃhadeva. Obviously, this king is identical with Jayasimha of the Parmāra dynasty who succeeded king Bhoja on the throne of Dhārā, and for whom we have a copperplate grant of Vikrama Saṃvat 1112 equivalent to 1055 A. D. ( Ep. Ind. III p. 86 ). This same Prabhācandra is, no doubt, the author of a commentary on the Prameya-kamala-martaṇḍa, which he wrote under Bhoja.

Unfortunately, I had no time to examine these voluminous works so closely as to find out where the author had explained the eighteen jātis, but it appears to me that the tippaṇa on the Nāgakumāracarita was written by this same Prabhācandra about 1055 A. D. that is, less than a century later than the composition of the work itself. This gloss has been very helpful to me generally throughout the work and particularly in construing a few obscure lines and phrases. In all, it explains about two thousand words and phrases of the text mostly by giving a Sanskrit synonym or paraphrase. I have made full use of these comments in preparing the glossary and the notes.

शब्दकोशः

शब्दकोशः

The figures indicate Sandhi, Kaḍavaka and line of the text respectively. In case of words occurring frequently in the same sense, at least one reference to their place of occurrence is given.

Purely tatsama words are, as a rule, omitted, except in a very few cases.

Words which I consider Deśī have been marked with an asterisk.

Sanskrit equivalents of Apabhraṁśa words or their Sanskrit originals as found in Hemacandra's Prākṛita Vyākaraṇa and Deśi-nāma-mālā, Vararuci's Prākṛta. Prakāśa and Dhanapāla's Paiya lacchī-nāma-mālā have been given throughout Vernacular equivalents have also been given wherever necessary and possible. In case of words not traceable as above, reference is made to other published Apabhraṁśa works such as Bhavisayatta-kahā, Saṇaṁkumāracariu and Jasaharacariu if the words could be found to have occurred there.

Lengthy discussions of derivation, meaning and explanation of words and phrases have been relegated to the Notes and a reference to this effect is made in the Glossary.

The following abbreviations have been used :—

NOTES

N. B.—In the following pages all the technical terms of Jaina religion and others are explained with authoritative texts quoted or referred to, difficult lines are translated, double-meaning expressions are cleared and obscure words or phrases are commented upon. The original tippanis are quoted where they are found to be sufficient to elucidate the meaning or where my explanations differ from them. These notes, along with the glossary and the summary given in the introduction are expected to guide the reader easily through the text. The figures at the beginning of each note indicate the Kaḍavaka and the line respectively.

I.

1. 1. पंचगुरु—अहत्, सिद्ध, आचार्य, उपाध्याय and साधु.
   कलि—(१) कलिकाल, (२) कलह.

Lines 3 to 10 are paronomastic applying to speech and a lady.

1. 3. दुविहालंकार—शब्दार्थालंकारैः पक्षे कटककटिसूत्राद्यलंकारैः. This is how the tippaṇa explains it. I would prefer to take the two-fold ornamentation as consisting of outward appearance and inner virtues ( रूप and गुण ) in the case of a lady corresponding to the शब्द and अर्थ in the case of speech.

लीलाकोमलइं पयाइं—लीलया शृङ्गारादिविलासेन कोमलानि चक्षुःप्रीतिजनकानि पदानि पादन्यासाः पक्षे अनायासेन चक्षुःश्रोत्रमनःसुखदानि पदरचनाः । टि.

1. 4. बहुहावभावविब्भम—

हावो मुखविकारः स्याद् भावः स्याच्चित्तसंभवः ।
विलासो नेत्रजो ज्ञेयो विभ्रमो भ्रूयुगान्तयोः ॥ टि.

भावः आत्मपरिणामः पक्षे स्वस्वभावो भर्तृहितत्वञ्च ।
विभ्रम–धैर्यरहिता प्राणिषु कौटिल्ययुक्ता च पक्ष विगतभ्रमा । टि.

1. 5. अत्थें—पक्षे परनरपराङ्मुखलक्षणोऽर्थः । टि.
   विण्णाणइं--पक्षे विशिष्टज्ञानं केवलज्ञानम् । टि.
   संभरंति--धारणं पोषणं वा कुर्वन्ती । टि.

I. 6. देसभासउ–The Prakrits current in different parts of the country as distinguished from Sanskrit.

लक्खणइं–संस्कृत-प्राकृतलक्षणानि शरीरगतकलशकुलिशादिलक्षणानि च । टि.

I. 7. अइरंदछंदमग्ग°—अतिमहता मात्राप्रस्तारमार्गेण सरस्वती याति। स्त्री तु अतिछंद्रेण आराध्यानां पितृश्वश्रूप्रभृतीनां छन्देन नानाभिप्रायेण याति। श्वश्रूश्वसुरभर्तृदेवरादीनां इच्छया गच्छन्तीत्यर्थः। टि.

पाणेहि—स्त्रीपक्षे दशप्राणाः पञ्चेन्द्रियादयः। सरस्वतीपक्षे तु—

'श्लेषः प्रसादः समता समाधिर्माधुर्यमोजः पदसौकुमार्यम्।
अर्थस्य चाव्यक्तिरुदारता च कान्तिश्च काव्यस्य गुणा दशैते'॥ टि.

Dandi, is his Kāvyādarśa, calls these qualities of poetry as the prāṇa of Vaidarbhī style 'इति वैदर्भमार्गस्य प्राणा दशगुणाः स्मृताः'॥ for the पञ्चेन्द्रियादिदशप्राणाः note the following Gāthā from Boha-pāhuda, 35.

पंच वि इंदियपाणा मणवयकाएण तिण्णि बलपाणा।
आणप्पाणप्पाणा आउगपाणेण दहपाणाः।

Also see Dravya Saṁgraha, 3; Panchāstikāya, 30.

MS. D. also gives a variant reading for this foot 'पाणेहिं दसहिं संपण्ण हुंति'. This had escaped notice at the time of noting the variants.

1. 8. णवहिं मिरसेहिं—सरस्वती पक्षे शृङ्गारादिरसैः, स्त्रीपक्षे नवीनरसघृततैलादिभिः। टि. This, however, is not necessary as the शृङ्गारादिरस may suit both cases.

विग्गहतएण-सरस्वतीपक्षे समास-तद्धित-कारकविग्रहाः। स्त्रीपक्षे तु ऊर्ध्वाधोमध्यभागेषु विग्रहत्रयेण। टि. The tippaṇa on MSS. A and B adds 'कर्मधारय- तत्पुरुष-बहुव्रीहिः इति समासत्रयम'; while that on MS. D. adds 'शरीरवक्रतात्रयेण यदि वा कार्मण-तैजसौदारिकेण, कार्मण-तैजस-वैक्रियकेण वा शरीरत्रयेण।

1. 9. दुवालसंगि—सरस्वतीपक्षे आचाराङ्गादिद्वादशाङ्गैर्युक्ता, स्त्रीपक्षे तु—

णलयाबाहू य तहा नियंबु पुट्ठी उरो य सीसं च।
अट्ठे व दु अंगाइं सेस उवंगा हु देहस्स।
इत्यष्टौ कर्ण-नासिका-नयनौष्ठचत्वारः इति द्वादशांगानि।

For the twelve Angas of the Jaina Scriptures see Ādipurāṇa XXXIV, 135ff; Harivaṁśa-puraṇā II, 92 ff. For a complete analysis of the existing Angas see Weber's 'Sacred Literature of the Jainas' in the 'Indian Antiquary'.

चउदहपुव्विल्ल—चतुर्दशपूर्वैः इष्टा युक्ता सरस्वती। स्त्री तु चतुर्दशैः पूर्वपुरुषैर्युक्ता। पूर्वपुरुषाः पितुः सप्त मातुः सप्त। टि.

The Fourteen Pūrvas formed parts of the 12th Anga Dṛṣṭivāda

सत्तभंगि—The seven modes of predication according to the Jaina system of Logic are स्यादस्ति, स्यान्नास्ति, स्यादवक्तव्यम्, स्यादस्त्यवक्तव्यम्, स्यान्नास्त्यवक्तव्यम् and स्यादस्तिनास्त्यवक्तव्यम्। It is on account of these that the Jaina system of thought is called स्याद्वाद or अनेकान्त. For a full exposition of this see Pancāstikāya, Intro. lxvii ff. and texts Syādvādamanjari of Mallisena and Saptabhangitarangiṇī of Vimalasūri.

NOTES

पक्षे जिनमुखात्सामुद्रकं निर्गतं तत्रोत्तमस्त्रियाः लक्षणमुक्तम् । टि. For Sāmudraka or physiognomy, see Harivaṁśapurāṇa Chapt. 23, verses 55–107.

1. 10. वायरण वित्ति—व्याकरणवृत्त्या प्रकटितं नामाधिकारो यया । स्त्रीपक्षे तु व्याकरणवृत्त्या प्रकटितं व्युत्पादितं नाम 'स्त्री' इति शब्दो यस्याः । टि.

पसियउ—सरस्वती मम प्रसीदतु, वरदा भवतु । टि.

1. 11–12. Read the whole of line 11 as one compound and line 12 as consisting of two compounds धवलहरसिहरिहयमेहउलि पविउलमण्णखेडणयरि, and translate as follows:—

" In the big town of Mānyakheta which scraped the clouds by its mountain like palaces, and inaccessible owing to the current of water in the form of the sword placed in the hand of Śri Krsnarāja, etc." The connection of the sentence is with the next Kadavaka.

2. 1–2. The poet mentions his parents Mugdhādevi and Keśava Bhaṭṭa, his gotra–Kāśyapa, his patron–Nanna and his own title Abhimāna-meru.

2. 3. 'महोदधेः शिष्येण कथंभूतेन महोदधिश्रीशयेन महासमुद्रलक्ष्मीप्राप्तकरेण शिष्यद्वयेन गुणधर्मेण शोभनेन च पुष्पदन्तः श्रीपंचमीफलकथने प्रार्थितः । टि.

Guṇadharma and Śobhana were both sons of Bharata, the author's patron ( see introduction ).

3. 1. आयण्णहिं—'Let us hear'. 1st per. plural present tense, or 2nd person singular causal, Imperative mood, आकर्णयामो वयम्, टि

3. 2. वल्लहराय—The Rāstrakuta kings called themselves by this name which was also known to the Arabs ( see Anc. Hist. of India. by V. Smith ).

3. 5. If we read विच्छिण्ण (°न्न) in place of वित्थिण्ण ( विस्तीर्ण ), the poet would seem to tell us that Apabhramśa was more or less neglected at the time in literary circles but that the house of Bharata patronised and tried to revive it. So far, only two works of Apbhramśa–Paumacariu and Harivaṁśa purāṇa–of Svayambūh have become known as definitely prior to the works of Puspadanta.

3. 12. The glosses in MSS A and B on the one hand and D on the other, differ about the names, the former saying 'नाइल्लशीलभद्दौ भट्टौ ताभ्यामपि कविर्भणित :, and the latter केनचित् नागेन्द्रशीलेन '. The names recur in I, 5, 1 where we have सीलभट्ट in in place of सीलइय.

3. 13. णण्णु जि अण्णु etc. गृहस्थशोभायां नन्न एव नान्यः । टि.

4. 1. आसन्न-भव्य means a person who is capable of attaining salvation in the near future. The stanza is full of व्यतिरेक अलंकार where Nanna is praised as superior even to Bṛhaspati, Hanumat, Gāngeya, Yudhisthira, Karna, the moon, the earth, the Meru mountain and the ocean in the respective qualities for which the latter are renowned.

For the defeat of Bṛhaspati by his enemy Śukra, see Mahābh. I, 71, 9. The glosses, however, suggest ' रावणेन यदा इन्द्रो भग्नः तदा बृहस्पतिर्बंदिगृहे धृतः ' This fact is not traceable in the Sanskrit Padma purāṇa of Raviseṇācārya but is found mentioned in the Apabhraṃśa work Paumacariu of Svayambhū XVII, 17, 9 according to my Ms. of the work For Gāngeya's running away from the battle field see Mahābhārata, Virāṭaparva--uttara-gograhaṇa Kathā.

5. 3. तणुवत-'तृणवत् तृणादपि कष्टं निन्द्यम् '। टि. धम्मेणाणिबद्ध etc. He is fixed in piety having abandoned guile. सड्ढ-शाठ्यम् मूर्खत्वं वा, टि.

5. 6. पडिवण्णसूर—An accomplished hero.

5. 7. For the three divisions of the universe, compare—

वेत्रासनमृदंगोरुझल्लरीसदृशाकृतिः ।

अधश्चोर्ध्वं च तिर्यक् च यथायोगमिति त्रिधा ॥ H P. IV, 6.

Also see Mulācāra. 7 14 ; Tatt. Sutra, chapt. III,

5. 10. अरहंत अरुह etc. 'Say, what the worshipful Arhats keep back (leave unsaid)' ? For the meaning of अरहंत note the following Gāthā—

अरिहंति णमोक्कारं अरिहा पूजा सुरुत्तमा लोए ।

रजहंता अरिहंति य अरहंता तेण उच्चंदे ॥ Mūlācāra 505.

6. 2. कसेरु, a kind of grass (Latin—Scripus Kesoor ), is particularly liked by the boars, Cf.

गुण्डकन्दः कसेरुः स्यात्क्षुद्रमुस्ता कसेरुका ।

सूकरेष्टः सुगन्धिश्च सुगन्धो गन्धकन्दकः ॥ BNR p. 521.

सुदर्शन is one of the five Merus, the other four being विजय, अचल, मंदर and विद्युन्माली, see also VIII, 15, 2 text.

6. 9. थलपोम-स्थलपद्म, Lat. Ionidium suffruticosum, see BNR p. 277.

6. 14. 'As if the divine city had dropped from the sky inspite of the mighty efforts of the king of gods to hold it up'.

7. The city is described by a series of poetic fancies.

8. 1. ' By whom was pacified and brought under control the spreading fire of his enemies' valour by means of the water of his excellent sword '.

8. 2. तिण्णि वि बुद्धिउ-स्वभावगुरुशास्त्रजाः सहजाहार्यसंस्कार्याः वा । टि.

तिण्णि वि सत्तिउ-प्रतापोत्साहमंत्रजाः। टि.

8. 3. चउरासम-The four orders (ब्रह्मचर्य etc.) were maintained in ( their respective ) duties by the ruler '. Or णिययकम्मि might be taken as a compound word ( निजकर्मणि ) and connected with the predicate सण्णिहिय in the preceding foot.

NOTES

8. 6. अरिछव्वग्ग–काम, क्रोध, लोभ, मान, मद and हर्ष. See कौटिलीय अर्थशास्त्र I, 4,3.
जेण ण्णायणाउ—येन अन्यायनाम विच्छिन्नम्।

8. 7. सत्त वि वसणइं—' दण्डपारुष्यकंदर्पवाक्पारुष्यार्थदूषणम् ।
सुरास्त्रीद्यूतपापर्द्धिकोपं व्यसनसप्तकम् । टि.

सत्त वि रज्जंगइं—स्वाम्यमात्यसुहृत्कोषो राष्ट्रं दुर्गं तथा बलम् ।
प्राकृतं सप्तकं प्रोक्तं नीतिशास्त्रविशारदैः । टि.

9. 1, णिवसासणु—' Leaving the lionseat which is ( the insignia of ) royal authority'. ' नृपस्यशासनज्ञापकम् ' टि.

9. 7. णग्गोग्ग°—नग्नोग्रखड्गव्यापृतकरः।

10. 0. The stanza is full of Yamakas both Sabhaṅga and Abhaṅga.

11. 1. समवसरण is the audience hall of a Tīrthaṃkara.

11. 3. थियपरिमिय°—whose nails and curly hair do not grow beyond a particular measure.

12. 1. णरकोट्ठ—नरकोष्ठ is a special part of the Samavasaraṇa assigned for men.

12. 2. पंचत्थिकाय—The five astikāyas of Jaina philosophy are जीव, पुद्गल, धर्म, अधर्म and आकाश (see Pancāstikāyasāra of Kundakundācārya)

12. 3. इसिवयइं पंच—अहिंसा, अस्तेय, सत्य, ब्रह्मचर्य and अपरिग्रह. These five vows are observed in their strictest form by the ascetics, and are called Mahāvratas; or Ṛsivratas while, as observed by householders in their less stringent form they are called Aṇuvratas or Gṛhavratas.

पंच विगईउ—नरक, तिर्यक् मनुष्य, देव and मोक्ष.

समिदीउ पंच—The five Samitis observed by ascetics are (1) ईर्या Walking with care to avoid injury to any living beings; भाषा-care to make truthful and pure speech; (3) एषणा-care to take pure food; (4) आदाननिक्षेपण care in placing and picking up their articles such as Kamaṇḍala, Picchi, and books. (5) प्रतिष्ठापना–Answering calls of nature in a clean place.

गुत्तीउ तिण्णि—मनोगुप्ति, वचनगुप्ति and कायगुप्ति (see IX, 2, 4 text; for exposition see Mūlācāra 331-335).

12. 4. रयणाइं तिण्णि–सम्यग्दर्शन-सम्यग्ज्ञान and सम्यक् चारित्र.

सल्लाइं तिण्णि–The 3 Śalyas or darts rankling in the heart are मिथ्यात्व, माया and निदान. ( See Sāgāradharmāmṛta IV, 1. )

गारवइं तिण्णि–ऋद्धिगौरव, रसगौरव and सुखगौरव. ( See Mūlācāra, 52 ).

12. 5. दहमेयधम्म-क्षमा, मार्दव, आर्जव, सत्य, शौच, संयम,तपः,त्याग, आकिंचन and ब्रह्मचर्य.

छजीवकाय-पृथ्वी, अप्, तेजस्, वायु, वनस्पति and त्रस. ( See Mūlācāra 205 ff. ).

णवणोकसाय-Nine subsidiary passions are हास्य, रति, अरति, शोक, भय, जुगुप्सा and स्त्री.पुं. नपुंसकवेद.

12. 6. एयारह पडिमउ सावयाहं-The eleven stages of householders' religious advancement are दर्शन, व्रत, सामायिक, प्रोषधोपवास,सचित्तत्याग, रात्रिभोजनत्याग, ब्रह्मचर्य, आरम्भत्याग, परिग्रहत्याग, अनुमतित्याग and उद्दिष्टत्याग. They are mentioned in the following Gāthā :—

दंसण-वय-सामाइय-पोसह-सचित्त-रायभत्ते य ।
बंभारंभपरिग्गह-अणुमण उद्दिठ देसविरदो य ॥ ( Cārittapāhuḍa, 22 ).

12. 7. बारह अंग and चउदहपुव्व see notes on I, 1, 9.

12. 8. For पुग्गलसंजोग (contamination of soul with matter) and पयईरस प्रकृतिरस ( the formation of Karmic energies which bring about experiences of pleasure and pain) see Practical Path by C. R. Jain, chapter III–V.

12. 9. आसव–आश्रव ( inflow of karmic matter in the soul) संवर ( stopping of the inflow) and णिज्जर–निर्जरा ( Eradication of the karmic energies ). For exposition see ' Practical Path '.

12. 10. गुणठाणारोहण–There are fourteen stages of soul's advancement. They are called गुणस्थान, for which see ' Gommaṭasāra–Jivakāṇḍa.'

13. 1. वीराणए etc. ' At the command of Vira ( i. e. Tirthaṁkara Mahāvira ) Gotama ( His chief disciple ) spoke.'

13. 7–8. णग्गोहरोह °–' Where the farmer's wife swinging by the beautiful offshoots of the bunyan tree was looked at ( with amazement ) by the fairy who became partial to her charming features'. The gloss-maker, however, seems to construe हिंदोलंती with जक्खिणी, for, commenting on हिंदोलंती he says अत्र तृतीया लुप्ता । पक्षीदेव्या हालिनी दृष्टा । टि.

15. 4. सिरिसुहरसाल–' Enjoyer of the pleasures of royalty '.

17. 4. चारत्तु णहहं etc.–The great toes rising up proclaimed the charm of the nails '. एतौ अंगुष्ठौ उद्भूय नखानां चारुत्वं कथयतः । टि.

17. 5. णं भुवणु etc. ' As if holding a council to conquer the world'.

17. 7. 'Cupid was giving himself airs by the body of the bride which possessed those knee-joints.'

17. 12. परमाणणासु–परेषां माननाशकम् । टि.

17. 15–16. ' When people died being shot by the arrow from the bow of Cupid in the form of her curved eye-brows, why, then, have the hair on the head of the beautiful lady assumed crookedness ( i. e. curliness ) ? '

18. 3. लोणिय चडंति–The bride and the bride-groom are besmeared with butter at the time of marriage (Marāthi लोणी–butter ).

NOTES

II.

1. 9. 'Another says, the parrot did not die even on coming in contact with the mango-blossom.'

2. 19–20. 'Why do not those loving eyes close, oh friend, which witnessed the pleasures and miseries falling to the lot of the wicked and the good respectively?'

3. 7. कयाहिंदसेव—कृता अहीन्द्रैः सेवा यस्य सः ।

3. 14–18. Compare Navasāhasānka-carita XVIII, 23.

> नाङ्कं न भस्म न जटा न कपालदाम नेन्दुर्न सिद्धतटिनी न फणीन्द्रहारः ।
> नोक्षा विषं न दयिताऽपि न यत्र रूपमव्यक्तमीश किल तद्धते नमस्ते ॥

see also IV, 12, 9–10 text.

3. 22. कउ instead of कय, would be more correct with पणासु.

4. 3, मणु अत्थि णत्थि—She asks for a discourse on Saptabhangi, for which see notes on I, 1, 9.

4. 8. The meaning of the first foot is not quite clear. रूउ ल्हसइ is commented upon as रूपं हीनं भवति. The whole may, therefore, be translated as 'By (i. e. in the presence of) a form of superior beauty another form becomes less attractive'. Note the variants.

5. 3. मत्तवारण—(1) A fence round a large building or mansion; a turret or a small room on the top of a large building; a varandah (Apte's Dictionary).

(2) An elephant in rut.

(3) वारण-निवारक.

5. 6. णरिंदविंदवण्णिया—राज्ञां वन्द्यः जयंधरः तस्य पत्निका । टि. In this case it is preferable to read वंद instead of विंद. See variant.

6. 4. होसइ etc. 'May be that my beloved has taken to penance.' Note the use of होसइ to denote possibility.

6. 17. Perhaps translatable as follows. 'As, to a person steeped in sin, jewel that produces happiness does not come due to his poverty,' etc. सुहसयणु, शुभसवनम् (सुखोत्पादकम्) or सुखशयनम् .

7. 5-6. She saw in dream an elephant, a lion, the ocean, the moon, the sun and a lotus pool.

7. 8. सधरधर—'पर्वतसहिता धरा भूः । टि. For धर in the sense of a mountain see also IV, 1, 15; VII, 3, 6. Also see variants.

8. 1-2. 'The steel-door becoming loose in its tight-fitting joints when touched by his great-toe, would give way.' ल्हस्-हस् (स्रंस्), see glossary.

8. 13-14. 'As ideas are born of a poet's mind, glorious Dāmodara was formerly born of Devaki and Jina (Nemi, the 22nd Tīrthaṁkara) of Śivadevi, and as virtues are born of endurance, so a child was born to her.'

9. 1. सुंदरगह°--'मनोहरचन्द्रप्रमुखपुण्यग्रहदृष्टिदृष्टः'। टि.

9. 9. 'Sportive women, radiant with auspicious China-camphor (धवल), danced playfully.,

'चीनकश्चीनकर्पूरःकृत्रिमो धवलः पटुः।
मेघसारस्तुषारश्च द्वीपकर्पूरजः स्मृतः॥ B NR.P. 89.

10. 2. मणिकलस ° may be translated as 'Holding in their hands jewelled jars which reflected their faces'. मणिकलशान्येव स्वमुखदर्पणानि करेषु एषाम् । See variants.

10. 8. 'तं जोइउ इह परलोयगइ' is some what obscure. The gloss, however, explains it as 'तन्मुखं दृष्टं सत् इह परलोकगतिर्गमनं भवति तस्य दर्शकस्य'। टि.

10-11 'They saw the face of the Jina in which there was no biting of the lip nor knitting of the brows (i. e. free from pride or anger)' etc.

11. 2. महापंचकल्लाण The celebrations at the time of a Jina's गर्भ, जन्म, तपः, ज्ञान and निर्वाण are called Panca kalyana.

11. 5. असोयदुमा °–अशोकेन्द्रे सुष्ठ आसीनाः पक्षिणो मायामया देवाः। टि.

11. 9. फणीणंरसा °–'Where serpents had commenced their sport of sputtering water'. रसस्य (जलस्य) आसारः.

11. 11-12 'Where the swan, shooting up suddenly being excited with love indulges in gentle coaxing, and, with its beak, presents to the female swan, abiding in the a lake, lotus stalk'. जहिं in the couplet is connected with तहिं in the next Kadavaka.

12. 4-5. 'As if the lord of the serpents had extended upwards, his hand shining with the nails in the form of the crest-gem.' etc.

13. 7. आकुंभत्थल ° 'Where elephants would sink up to their forehead there comfort was provided by the gracious gods'.

14. 1. The father called his son 'Prajābandhura' while the gods called him 'Nāgakumāra'.

14. 10. 'Even a friend would look with a frown on an unlucky person, while by good luck, a cobra would become a couch.'

14. 12. णं णरु दोणणिवासहो-' As Arjuna ( Nara ) was taken to the residence of Droṇa ( for education )'.

14. 13. पुप्फयंतजिणदास-A devotee of the Jina Puspadanta ( the 9th Tirthaṃkara ).

III.

1. 1. अट्ठारहलिविउ-The eighteen scripts are mentioned in the Samavāyāṅga and the Pannavanā Sutra of the Jaina canon. The two lists vary but several names are common, among which are the three well-known scripts of India, Brāhmi, Kharoṣṭrī and Drāvidi. The other two 'Javanāliya' and 'Pukkharasādi' also appear to be historical, though, these as well as the others, remain yet to be identified. ( See Buhler's Origin of Brahmi alphabet ).

Most of the arts and sciences mentioned in this Kaḍavaka are included in the sixty-four arts of Ancient India enumerated by Vātsāyana in his Kāmasūtra. ( See Dr. P. K. Acharya's 'Fine Arts' I. H. Q. V, 188 ff. Also compare similar passages in Jasa. I, 24 and Bhavis. II, 2.

2. 11. अहगारहो-अघकारस्य। टि. MS. B also suggests अंगारहो and the gloss explains it as स अंगारः यो दुष्टान् पुष्णाति.

2. 16. Separate तिक्ख so as to make it an adj. of मणुय like कायर. तिक्ख-क्रुद्धाः निर्दयाः वा। टि.

3. 1-2. धणकज्ज is paraphrased in the gloss as भांडागार, वल्लरिया as मांसपेशी and बंधणं as रक्षा. According to this the couplet may be translated as follows :—

'Whoever, being greedy, puts wealth in his treasury, adds fuel to the fire and gives charge of a piece of flesh to a cat, Oh blessed one.'

3. 3. 'Maintenance of wicked servants means honouring calamity ( or, is a mine of calamities, विधुराणां आदरः आकरः वा ); Vaśistha fell in great trouble (i.e., by such mistake )'. The reference, probably, is to Vaśistha's great hospitality to Viśvāmitra and the trouble that followed from the latter's ungrateful attempt to snatch away the sage's cow. ( See Rāmāyana Bālakāṇḍa, chapt. 51-56 ). The gloss, however, explains विहुरायरु as सदुःखस्य आदरः कृतः. This does not seem to fit in with the context.

3. 16. मयरद्धयवसणइं-The vices associated with Cupid. Or मयरद्धय may be read separate as Vocative ( meaning, Oh Nāgakumāra ).

4. 8-15. Compare the description of limbs here with the following from Varāhamihira's Bṛhat-Saṁhitā, chapt. 67, verses 85-88.

नाभी स्वरः सत्त्वमिति प्रशस्तं गम्भीरमेतत त्रितयं नराणाम् ।
उरो ललाटं वदनं च पुंसां विस्तीर्णमेतत् त्रितयं प्रशस्तम् ॥ ८५ ॥

वक्षोऽथ कक्षा नखनासिकास्यं कृकाटिका चेति षडुन्नतानि ।
ह्रस्वानि चत्वारि च लिङ्गपृष्ठं ग्रीवा च जङ्घे च हितप्रदानि ॥ ८६ ॥
नेत्रान्तपादकरताल्वधरोष्ठजिह्वा रक्ता नखाश्च खलु सप्त सुखावहानि ।
सूक्ष्माणि पञ्च दशनाङ्गुलिपर्वकेशाः साकं त्वचा कररुहा न च दुःखितानाम् ॥ ८७ ॥
हनुलोचनबाहुनासिकाः स्तनयोरन्तरमत्र पञ्चमम् ।
इति दीर्घमिदं तु पञ्चकं न भवत्येव नृणामभूभृताम् ॥ ८८ ॥

(see also HP, XXIII, 59 ff.)

4. 12. Single hair in each hair-pit is a sign of kingship.—

एकैकं कूपके रोम राज्ञां द्वे द्वे सुमेधसाम् ।
त्र्यादीनि जडनिःस्वानां केशाश्चैवंफलाः स्मृताः ॥ HP. 23, 64.

4. 13. MS. E reads सत्तु (सत्व) in place of सोत्तु (श्रोत्र). This is more in accordance with Varāhamihira. The variant had escaped notice at the time of preparing the text.

6. 4. सरजाइभेय—स्वर is a diatonic interval or note in music and जाति is the more ancient name of राग i. e. type of melody. ( see HP. XXIX, 134 ff; Bharata's Nātya Śāstra; Sang. Rat. etc. For exposition in English, see Music of India by Popley H.A.)

आलाविणि—आलापिनी is one of the kinds of Vīnā.—

तद्भेदास्त्वेकतंत्री स्यान्नकुलश्च त्रितन्त्रिका ।
चित्रावीणा विपञ्ची च ततः स्यान्मत्तकोकिला ॥
आलापिनी किन्नरी च पिनाकी संज्ञितापरा ।
निःशङ्कवीणेत्याद्याश्च शार्ङ्गदेवेन कीर्तिताः ॥

Sang. Rat. VI, 9-10.

They are said to differ from each other in the number of strings which rises in due order. Ālāpinī would, thus, be a Vīṇā with seven strings. ibid VI, 108-110. Acc. to H P. XIX, 137, Vasudeva once played upon a Vīṇā called sughosā having seventeen strings.

6. 11 घित्त—in the sense of 'thrown' is derived from क्षिप् but in the sense of 'taken' it can be better connected with घेत् which Vararuci, VIII, 16 gives as a substitute for ग्रह् and which seems to be the original of Marāthi घेणें. The substitute for क्षिप् according to Hem. IV, 143 is घत्त.

7. 8. अकुलीणु वि etc. compare 'स्त्रीरत्नं दुष्कुलादपि' ।

7. 14. जुत्ताजुत्तउ etc. compare आज्ञा गुरूणां ह्यविचारणीया' ।

8. 4. पणइणिपरिमिएण 'Surrounded by his beloveds' qualifying कुमारें.

10-12. मज्जमि, instead of भज्जमि, would suit better.

NOTES

10. 14. It would be better to read भउ लजमोहमेलावउ–' there was a concurrence of shyness and infatuation.'

11. 9 पेसिय-प्रेष्य ; or it may be taken as प्रेषित and joined with कुंडरिहिं.

12. 5-6 The diceboard ( कडिल्लु ) is compared to the sky, the bet किंत्त) to the moon, and the conch shells ( वराडिअ ) to the stars.

12. 12 दी णा र. The coins so called became current in India during the early centuries of the Christian era. The name occurs in the Nārada Smṛti. They were current in Kashmir and Gujrat during the 8th century. It is probably the same as Greek denarius ( IP. 165-166 ; HMHI. Vol. II p. 215-257.)

13. 3 ' His conch shall , used for throw as dice ) would shine well, but ours would not come ( i. e. to the desired position ) but would stop short, Oh lord ' or 'would stop just when about to come '; if we read आवंती थक्कइ. The idea would be clear to those acquainted with the game of dice.

13. 15-16 ',Wealth is difficult to obtain, to women, the fools, the weak and the helpless, but (is easy) to noble persons ; a man of qualities is good ' We have to supply some such word as सुलहु after उत्तममाणसहं to complete the sense.

14. 3-5 We have here a number of similes based upon paronomasia.

वं का ण णु—(1) with a curved mouth, (2) with a frowning face.

क स—(1) whip (2) touch-stone.

कु स (1) briddle, (2) Kusha grass.

ण र स म ज ण णु–नरश्रमजनन.

र इ णं द णु–(1) Saturn, (2) Yama,(3) Karṇa. In the last case णर would mean Arjuna.

ल क्ख ण क र व etc. ' Eating gram and so appearing like the hand of Lakṣmaṇa that slew the lord of Lankā '.

( लंकाया ईश्वरो रावणः लंकानां वा नूपुराणां ईश्वरः चणकः ( टि.)

Acc. to the Jaina Padmapurāna Rāvaṇa met his death at the hands of Laksmaṇa.

जव–(1) speed (2) a kind of grain (Yava).

15. 6. ' Thinking so, he built a separate mansion and gave it to Nāgakumāra ( Jhasakcu ).

15. 8 दो णा मु ह–द्रोणमुख is a capital of four hundred villages, see Yaśodhara's commentary on Kāma sūtra, P. 44.

' नगरमष्टशतग्रामीमध्ये तद्व्यवहारस्थानम् । पत्तनं यत्र राजधानी स्थिता । खर्वटं द्विशतग्रामीमध्ये । चतुःशतग्रामीमध्ये द्रोणमुखं नाम खर्वटान्महद्भवति । '

' द्रोणाख्यं सिन्धुवेलाजलधिवेलावलयितम् । टि.

15. 11 खंडियां सी ° ' broke up settlements of cattle '.

15. 14-15 ' Is their whiteness a match for that of my tusks ? (Thinking so) the mighty elephant pulls down the houses, thus playing as it were, the role of the zealous '.

16. 1-2 ' The irresistible, ichor-shedding elephant, like a donor, would not shirk though beaten with hundreds of stones; but would give the points of its tusks, like crores of jewe's, even to the unwilling '. The couplet is paronomastic.

16 12 अ प्पं प रि हू व उ etc 'Every one thought himself defeated'; or 'Every one was concerned to save himself ' ( सकलः जनः आत्मपरः भूतः )

16. 6 ग य ग य दं त °—गजाः गताः दन्तमुसलदलिताः. Or गजाः गजदंतमुसलाः दलिताः. This requires the separation of दलवट्टिय.

17. 9 ख णि स सि etc. As the moon, for a time, comes in contact with the constellation Hasta ( carvus ).

17. 13. व र क रि णा हि उ—' The excellent elephant was mastered.'

IV.

1. 2 स may refer to the elephant or it may be joined with तायहो ( स्वतातस्य ).

1. 10. धंघल is given by Hem. IV., 422, as a substitute for झकट. The latter, however, itself appears to be a Deśi word equivalent to झगडा of Hindi and Marathi. This is borne out by the context in which Hem. has used it Dr. Vaidya renders it by कलह ( see Hem. IV, 422 trans ; Jasa. glossary ). Our gloss paraphrases it by विघ्नकर, though मथक or विलोडक would suit our context better. धंघल seems to be the correct reading in Sanat 502, 9, where Dr. Jacobi reads धंधव.

In Kaḍavakas 2, 3 and 4, are expounded the religious duties of a householder and an ascetic, respectively called Sāgāra and Anagāra, see Cāritta Pāhuḍa, 21.

दुविहं संयमचरणं सायारं तह हवे निरायारं ।
सायारं सग्गंथे परिग्गहराहिये निरायारं ॥

2. 11 पंचुंबर–The fruit of the five kinds of Udumbara trees, namely वट Bunyan ; पिप्पल Polar-leaved Fig ; पर्कर Ficus Virance ; उदुम्बर Ficus Glomirata and काकोदुम्बर Ficus Oppositifolia.

3 1-8. कुपात्र, अपात्र and three kinds of सुपात्र-अधम, मध्यम and उत्तम-are distinguished ;—cf.

उत्तमपत्तं साहू मज्झमपत्तं च सावया भणिया ।
अविरदसम्माइट्ठी जहण्णपत्तं मुणेयव्वं ॥

3. 4 सम्मत Right faith is defined as follows:—

हिंसारहिए धम्मे अट्ठारसदोसवज्जिए देवे ।
णिग्गंथे पव्वयणे सद्दहणं होदि सम्मत्तं ॥ Mokkha Pāhuḍa, 90.

NOTES

3. 5 दुविह संजम–अंतरंग and बहिरंग.

3. 9 णवगुणविसिट्ठ–The recognised qualities of a donor are seven, while there are nine modes of honouring a saintly guest. e g.

सद्धा भत्ती तुट्ठी विण्णाणमलुद्धया खमा सत्ती ।
जत्थेदे सत्त गुणा तं दायारं पसंसंति ॥ VNS. 223.

5 2 Whether they would enjoy the earth or would do service to others day and night ( अहरत्तु ), which is the meanest ( of all professions )' ?

5. 8 It is better to read as in CE "रूपालोचने अत्यन्ते जाते'

7. 2 पवरवर°–प्रवरवरावतरणम्–° आगमनम् । टि.

7. 4 सयणिच्छिय–स्वजनानां वाञ्छितमङ्गलेन, स्वनिश्चितसुखेन वा । टि.

8. 6. वरइत्तसहोयरुपत्तुताम—There seems to be some confusion here. In this line we are told that the brother of her husband arrived ; while, from the sequel it appears that it was her husband himself.

9. 1. It would be better to read ससियरपसरमहुरणं though no MS. supports this.

9. 7–8. The instrumental in the two lines seems to be हेतौ, showing the reason for which Aridamana had become angry, in answer to Vyāla's question in line 5.

10. 16. तुलियगयासणि—तुलितगदाशनि.

11. 8. माम-हे माम, टि. From this it appears that Vyāla addressed his father-in-law as maternal uncle.

12. 9–10. Compare II, 3, 14.

12. 13. जणुणट्ठउ—etc. ' People fled away but the stranger would not move from his stand.'

15. 4–8. Notice a number of onomatopoetic verbs.

15. 13. हक्कारिउ—etc. 'And come back when called from wherever you be.

V.

1. 13. Yaśodhara, in his commentary on Kāmasūtra mentions Devadattā as a very accomplished courtesan who was courted even by the cultured. विदग्धानां रतार्थिनां लक्ष्यभूता निदर्शनभूता देवदत्तावत्. Kāmasūtra chapt. 3, P. 42.

2. 15. मंधाय—मान्धाता seems to be another name of Vinayapāla.

4. 15. णिब्भिच्चि हिं-निभृतैः वचनकरैः भक्तैः । टि.

6. 7. ‘He may do what pleases him, provided his anger is somehow allayed.’

6. 10. भणहु etc.–‘If you say, he may just now be offered as an oblation to the directions, i. e. executed.’

7. 3. पुण्णायइं etc.–‘Gathering punnāga flowers like merit (Punya). This is according to the amended text which appears to me to be more in keeping with the style of the poet. The reading of the MSS. पुण्णाउ is explained by the gloss. as पूर्णायुवत् in A and B and पुण्यागमनमिव in D.

8. 2. Kaśmir was the name of the country as well as of the capital. See 8. 8. below (कस्सीरउ पट्टणु).

8 10-15. The distraction of the women at the sight of Nāgakumāra is described.

8. 12. कुट्टु देइ etc.–‘ताम्बूलमध्ये खदिरसारं भणित्वा काष्ठं (काथानि AB) ददाति’ । टि.

10. 13. पहुकेराए–by the order of the king. केर here means ‘order’.

10. 15. Read सिहरी and तुंगो separately.

10. 17. णववासर°–‘Surpassing the cluster of the rays of the young sun.

10. 18. कवाडं दिण्णं–Compare Hindi किवाड देना, to close the door.

10. 20. समर–शबर–A wild tribe. Pliny mentions them as Suari and Ptolemy as Sabrae. They were an “ancient, wild race of wood-cutters who lived in jungles without any fixed habitation.” (Cun. Geo. p. 583.).

10. 21. अपुसिय°–With water of tears dropping from his eyes unwiped.
पिञ्छं-जलं, टि.

VI.

2. 8. विज्जाणिउरुंब–विद्यानां निकुरम्बः समूहः. See glossary.

3. 7. पंचविहु–i. e. the five senses.

3. 12. सोधम्मु–सद्धर्मः or, acc. to the gloss, सः जगत्प्रसिद्धः जिनधर्मः ।

4. 1. अंतेउरु—etc. ‘The inmates of the harem beat their breasts at last.’

4. 9. ल्हिक्कउ—etc. ‘Man, getting frightened, hides himself, but the approaching death cannot be prevented by fortification.’

4.11-13. असिपाणिएण—etc ‘with the water of the sword, the massive tree of sin grows, spreading its branches widely; but, its bitter fruit, when tasted, brings a frown on the lotus-face.’

NOTES

5. 3-5. Sensual pleasures are, here, represented as tender sprouts, the mind as an elephant, knowledge as the iron-hook, reading of religious books as a chain, concentration as the tieing post and the sage as the elephant- driver.

5. 8. 'And being devoted to the Jina-teaching, said 'you have no commission from me now.'

7. 8. णि य पु ण्ण सु व ण्ण प व ण्ण क सु—निजपुण्यसुवर्णप्रवर्णकशम् qualifying वसु.

7. 10. 'He lightly kicked aside and broke the wooden giant that was installed there on the ground.'

7. 16. वाहि–वह्+णिच्+क्त्वा–वाहयित्वा having started the elephant.

8. 3. प रि या णि य उ—(१) परिज्ञातः (२) परि+आनीतः. See also variants.

9. 4–8 भो य ण सं चा रु-A meal-course; or a nice meal if we take the alternative reading ( भोजनकं चारु ). By a series of double entrendes the meal is compared to a forest, a couple, a poem, gatikarma, a drama, an evening, Kūtantra ( grammar ), good poetry and a herd of lions.

Note पिव used for इव, which acc. to Vararuci, is a characteristic of Paiśāci ( 'इवस्य पिवः' कमलं पिव मुखम् Var. X, 4 ) but acc. to Hem. II, 182, is common to all Prakrits. Dr. Woolner thinks the illustration of Vararuci as probably taken from the Bṛhat kathā ( Intro. to Prak. p. 91 ).

We have here a mention of Kūtantra, i. e. the grammar going by that name which acc. to tradition, was composed by Śarva-varman at the request of a prince of the Sātavāhana family, during the early centuries of the Christian era. It is, probably, this work which Hiuen Tsang refers to as the grammar reduced to 2,500 slokas by a Brahman of South India, and widely spread even throughout all the frontier provinces. The earliest known commentator, Durgāsiṃha cannot be placed later than the 8th century. ( See E. H. D. p.54-55; Life of Hiuen Tsang, Beal's trans. p. 122; S S G. For further information see 'Kātantra and Kaumara-Lāta' by Lūders-Berlin 1930 ).

10. 13 णि य पि य र व णु–निजप्रियारमणः ( निजस्त्रीकान्तः परस्त्रीपराङ्मुखः टि. )

10. 16 'This is Dharma; or else, are there any tall horns on the brow of Dharma ?'

11. 5 'He had two queens Satyavatī and Vasundharā, beaming with love and keeping grain and gold.' Join सच्चवइ with वसुंधरिउ and णेहुज्जल with सास°.

12. 4-5-These two lines seem to be interpolated for supplying the geneology of Vanarāja. This is the conclusion to which I am driven by noticing the natural connection between line 3 and 6 which is clumsily interrupted by the intervening lines, combined with the fact that the latter are found in one MS. only and there also, added subsequently on the margin.

12. 10 'You are a rooted tree to the good' ( i. e. affording protection like the shade and fruit of a tree ).

13. 10-11 Mark the accusative plural form ending in ए in भडे, गए etc.

13. 19 'You and your king are the dust of my feet.'

14. 5 पच्चारइ–see glossary. It may be equivalent to Hindi पछाड़ना to hurl down.

15. 13 The four Ārādhanas are–दर्शन, ज्ञान, चरण and तपस्.

VII.

1. 14. This line seems to be interpolated. It repeats the sense of line 10 except for the simile.

1. 16. बद्धा हरि etc.–'The horses that had entertained a desire to eat the kuśa grass, were tied up like bad pupils who prefer bad teachings.'

1. 17-18. 'Dāna appears good being ever undertaken by elephants which are controlled by the iron-hook and which put themselves in chains, even as by hands that serve as a check to the wicked, but put a restraint upon themselves.'

2. 4. 'Who did not know that wretched Sun-plant (Calotropis Gigentea). esteemed by the goats, the paralytic, the cheat and the treatises (i. e. on medicine),

Two varieties of this plant are recognised in ancient works, i e. the white and the red, both of which are recommended as a treat for paralysis etc.

अर्कद्वयं सरं वातकुष्ठकण्डूविषव्रणान् ।
निहन्ति प्लीहगुल्मार्शःश्लेष्मोदरशकृत्कृमीन् ॥ BNR p. 380.

'The drug is employed to cure all kinds of fits, epilepsy, hysteria, lock-jaw, convulsions in children, paralytic complaint, cold sweats, poisonous bites and venereal complaints.' (MDI p. 12.).

Goats are known to relish its leaves and the cheats use it as it acts as a poison in large doses.

2. 5. Elephants are said to be particularly fond of Śallaki (Boswelia Therifera) as some of its Sanskrit names गजभक्ष्या- गजप्रिया suggest. cf.

शल्लकी गजभक्ष्या च सुवहा सुरभी रसा ।
महेरुणा कुन्दुरुकी वल्लकी च बहुस्रवा ॥ BNR. p. 306.

2. 6. पीलु—Mustard tree of scripture (Salvadara Parsica) is dear to camels, hence it is also called करभवल्लभ.

2. 8. णग्गोह—(१) न्यग्रोध (२) नग्नौघः see ante p. 380. (पक्षे पापिन्याः श्रियः मुनिसमूहः रोचते, टि.)

2. 9. कोविधवलु°—A certain load-bull esteemed soft grass.

3. 6. पत्तवत्त°—प्राप्तवृत्ताः (श्रुतवृत्तान्ताः) ते धरवत् धरणिवत् च धीराः तेषां । for धर in the sense of पर्वत see also II, 7, 8; IV, 1, 15. See also the variant.

6. 2. "My hand has advanced to the good sword for taking out the blood of the enemy." Note कड्ढिवि equivalent to कृष्टुम्.

6. 3 4. By the use of paronomastic expressions warriorship is fancied as poetic talents. उज्जुयपय (१) उद्यतपद ready steps (२) ऋजुपद straight grammatical forms. कव्वु (१) कव्य (२) काव्य.

6. 5-6. Double entrendes continue. सत्थ-शस्त्र, शास्त्र ; धम्मु-धनुः, धर्मः; गुण bow-string, virtues; मोक्ख discharge, salvation.

6. 7. पहुभूमिणियसगु—possession of lands given by my master.

6. 8. चंचलु—मनश्चित्तं हृदयं, टि. । Acc. to this the line may be translated. 'This fickle (mind) plunges in despicable mirths and falls in evil company though held in check again and again'. Compare, चंचलं हि मनः कृष्ण ' Gita.

6. 9. 'Let the jackal to-day eat away my heart which is a resort of the wicked and the harlots' ( or acc. to the alternative reading—my wicked heart which is the abode of the harlots ).'

The gloss explains वेसावाडउ as वेश्यापाटके गुप्तं according to which the translation would be 'my heart which is set upon the ward of the wicked and the harlots.'

6. 10. सामिहे°-' The master's debt has accumulated.' आवग्ग seems to be a substitute for आरुह् like चड and वलग्ग ( Hem. IV, 206 ). The gloss also suggests this. ( See glossary ).

Dr. Gune's explanation of it as आपद्गत-' resort of the distressed ' seems wide off the mark ( see Bhavis. glossary ).

6. 12. 'I am going to cut short the life of the enemy and his fortune sweet through royal favour.'

9. 3. 'The youth was accorded approbation by his father-in-law who congratulated the vanquisher of his foe.'

बद्धउ-वर्धितः ( Cf. दिष्ट्या वर्धसे ); रिउसाहारिउ-रिपुसंहारकः ।

This is one way of explaining the second foot of the line. Another way is to separate रिउ from साहारिउ and translate ' By him was captured the enemy crest-fallen ' ( गयमोहम्मि साहारओ D VIII, 26. ). This seems to be the meaning of the gloss धीरितं on साहारिउ.

A slightly different meaning is obtained by taking साहारिउ in the sense of संवारितः in accordance with Hem. IV, 82 ( संवृगेः साहर-साहट्टौ ). साहार ( verb ) and साहारिअ ( participle ) occur several times in Bhavis, and Dr. Gune's opinion is that the meaning given by Hem. ' does not suit any of the passages '. I, however, find the meaning suiting perfectly well in each of the passages.

9. 5 'Mercury ( पारयरस ) looks beautiful when fixed (i e. when its liquidity is turned into solidarity by admixture with other substances, for which process, see, Hindu Chemistry p. 131 with relative Sanskrit texts in the Appendix.)

10.1. णि व च उ रं ग etc. 'Breaking the fourfold army like a water-jar'.

The gloss supplies केचन राजानः to be construed with थविवि 'and having established certain kings'.

11. 2. चंदाहावप्पें—'By the father of the maiden named Chandā. चंदा इति आह्वं नाम यस्याः तस्याः बप्पः पिता तेन. For चंदा see VII, 15, 4.

14. 1-4. By the use of paronomastic adjectives a contrast is made out between the arrows of Sukaṇṭha and those of Nāga k.'.

15. 8. जी य उ प वि०—The gloss explains this as 'असहायसहायकारि यत् जीवितव्यं तत् पविः वज्रसमानम् । If we take the alternative reading पर in place of पवि, we might explain it as असहायसहायकारि जीवितव्यम् परम् उत्कृष्टम् '.

VIII.

1. 9 छ प्प ए ण-भ्रमरेण धूर्तेन च, टि.

1. 12 अंब इ य हे-चम्पककलिकायाः, टि. Champaka is sweet-scented calophyllum (Lat. Plumieria acutifolia), It is shunned by the bee. 'भ्रमराणां घातकरः' BNR p. 278.

1. 13-14 'The bee that is attached to the jasmine and hovers, in its infatuation, over the rich blossom that it has put forth does not kiss the Yūthikā on account of its bitter limbs that spoil the taste ( or break the mirth )'.

जा इ-जाति .Jasminum Grandiflorum :

जु हि य-यूथिका .Jasminum aurieculatum. For the latter's bitter taste see BNR p. 277.

'यूथीयुग्मं हिमं तिक्तं कटुपाकरसं लघु' ।

2. 5. 'His daughter is Kāmarati on whom even the Creator dies ( i. e. is enamoured ) as he thinks of her peerless beauty'. को-ब्रह्मन्, टि.

2. 6. 'She does not love any man as boiled rice is unpalatable to one who has his mouth scorched with slake-lime.' This is how I interpret it. The gloss, however, has it यथा शीतज्वरेण अजीर्णेन वा हतांगस्य अन्नं ( शालिः ) न रोचते ।

4. 12-13 'Seeing Mahāvyāla she shook her head, and with a smile, said to her friend 'one who is courted by Madana, would not marry this man, as Mādhava was chosen by Śri.' It would be more correct if we read वम्महु instead of वम्मह.

5. 11. for सु पु रि स ल क्ख ण See III, 4 text and notes.

5. 12. दम्म seems to be the same as Roman drachma: These coins may have been introduced simultaneously with 'Dinaras' for which see III, 12, 12 notes.

7 14. मरुहयमयरद्धउ-मरुता हतः मकरध्वजः येन सः ।

8. 4. विवाह-(1) Marriage; (2) Visnu (गरुडवाहन).

8. 8. दहमु विट्टु-The nine Nārāyaṇas of the Jain Purāṇas are त्रिपृष्ट, द्विपृष्ट, स्वयंभु, पुरुषोत्तम, नरसिंह, पुंडरीक, दत्तदेव, लक्ष्मण and कृष्ण.

8. 9. The Bhavanendras are ten called कुमार e. g. असुर, नाग, विद्युत, सुपर्ण, अग्नि, द्वीप, उदधि, दिक्, वायु and स्तनित. Amongst the twenty presumed here, perhaps their ten Pratyendras are included. The thirty two Surendras enumerated in Pratisthāsāroddhāra of Aśādhara p 60-66. include the ten Bhavanendras.

8. 10. छउमत्थ-छद्मस्थ-sages in the 11th and 12th stages of spiritual advancement. The 24 Tīrthamkaras are well-known.

8. 11. The eleven Rudras recognised by the Jainas are :—भीमबालि, जितशत्रु, रुद्र, विश्वानल, सुप्रतिष्ठ, अचल, पुण्डरीक, अजितधर, जितनाभि, पीठ and सात्यकि.

9. 2-3. कइ-कवि, कपि; दियवर-द्विजवर-पक्षिन्, ब्राह्मण; पत्त-पत्र, पात्र.

10. 3. कउ वीरहो etc.-मंदरागः कृतः वीरस्य कुमारस्य । टि.

10. 7-10. 'Who is bowed to by mendicants influenced by women, and by divinities of malignant disposition? You, the world-teacher, are easily missed by those who are doomed to be the wanderers in the cycle of metampsychosis. Highly excited by the impulse of cupid and swooned by the excessive drink of attachment, the beings, when sprinkled over with the ambrosia of your speech. revive into sobriety.'

नाविजइ--कः नम्यते ; कोऽपि न नम्यते, टि.;

जीवणेण—(१) अमृतेन (२) जीवितव्येन.

13. 2. किं महु अत्थि गोहु--' Do you keep anything back from me ; or, is there anyone who would war against me?' गोह-गुह्य, or भट (D. II, 89. com.)

13. 14-15. ' What is the accomplishment of that wretched king who is attached to the lip of his mistress, when others are in distress? I regard that kingship really glorious in the world, which affords relief to the afflicted.' The gloss, however, has it ' स्त्री-ओष्ठरागवत् अन्यराज्ञां राजत्वम् ।

14. 12. णायणयाणय—नागैः नता आज्ञा येषां ते ' To whose command the Nagas bowed.' परिपालियपय-परिपालितप्रजाः ।

15. 1. मयगिल्लगंड--मद+आर्द्र+गंड. ' With frontal globes wet with ichor.' ( गिल्ल-Hindi गीला wet ) I can find neither suitability nor authority for Dr. Vaidya's paraphrase of गिल्लगंड as शिबिकावाहक (see Jasa. I, 27, 15. and glossary).

15. 2. पंचमेरु see I, 6, 2 notes.

16. 4-13-हरिसिय-हृष्ट ; सुसिहरिसिय-सुशिखरे श्रित.

सुरहिय-(१) सुरभित (२) सुर+हृत.
हरिणिय (१)हरिणी (२) हरि+नीत.
मणोहराउ—(१) मनोहर (२) मनसां ओघः तस्य रागः।
सुरतरुणिय--सुरतरुं नीत ; तरुणिय-तरुणी.
रक्खंकराय-मस्मकरौ ;
सई-सती ; लीला°-लीलया आलोकितः निजपुरुषः ( निजपुरुषश्रीः, टि. ) याभिस्ताः ।
सुधीर-adj. and proper name.
सुरविमाण-(1) his divine car, (2 the vehicle of the gods.
सवास-स्ववास ; पंडीसवास-पाण्ड्येश + वास.

IX.

1. 14 मंडलमेल्लइं धणइं-Ransom for his territories.

2. 5 जुत्ति probably means here युति i. e. confluence of planets that is considered auspicious.

2. 6 भग्गणयहो° 'As Samkranti is dear to a beggar Brahmana'. Saṁkranti is winter solstice which occasion is observed as a festival when alms are freely given and Brahmanas are fed.

3. 9–10 'Does not that bow and that woman render resplendent the person of a man, the bow endowed with a string, giving a good grip, made of a good bamboo and with an arrow fixed to it, and the woman, virtuous, slender, noble-born and rich ?'

4. 8 सभिइहिं see I, 12, 3 notes.

4. 9 For the Bhāvanas of an ascetic, see Mūlācāra chapt. IX.

5. 5 The Śvetambara belief that the sages even after attaining omniscience bear clothes and take food, is here criticised.

5. 7 This is the criticism of the Ksaṇika-vāda of the Buddhists against which the following objections are raised.—

(i) continuous knowledge is not possible in a being completely decaying and renewing every moment. For example, a man gone out could not return to the same spot if he did not continue essentially to be the same man, nor could he lay his hand on a thing which he had previously kept somewhere.

(ii) The relation of cause and effect in certain cases is such that the latter follows only during the subsistence of the former; for example, the cow and the milk or the lamp and the lamp-black. In such cases if the cause had passed away the effect could not follow.

5. 12 The objection against the 'Śūnya-vāda' is that if everything were void, what was the propriety of ascetic practices ?

NOTES

6. 1–3 The Kaul school, acc. to our author, held that the five elements, earth, water, fire, air and space were identical with Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, Iśvara and Śiva respectively. For the claims of the Kaul teachers see Jasa. I, 6, Karpura Mañjiri Act I.

6. 4–11 Various objections are raised against the school that considers the supreme principle or the soul as devoid of qualities ( Niṣkala or Nirguṇa ).

7. 1 'Can boiled grains be turned back into great millet or butter into milk? How can the accomplished' ( absolved ) wander again through the cycle of births involving the burden of taking and abandoning the body'?

The personality of Śiva, which acc. to the author, is accepted by Gautama and Kaṇāda, is a contradicton in terms i. e. an impossibility ( gaganārabinda ) as shown in the following lines.

7. 5 अयसिरखुंटणे पडियउ–The reference is to the Paurānic account of Śiva's cutting off the head of Brahmā ( Aja ). He is said to have thrown the head at a spot in Benares which is known as kapāla mocana after the incident.

8. 3 परयारिउ etc. The reference is to Vyāsa the reputed author of the purāṇas, who is said in Mahābhārata to have cohabited with the wives of Vicitravīrya.

9. 7 The reference is to the injunction 'याज्ञिकी हिंसा हिंसा न भवति'.

13. 12–13 These are the twenty five tattvas of the Sānkhya system.

11. 1–6 We have here the tenets of the Nāstika–Vāda of Bārhaspatya, the central principle of which is that life is produced by the conglomeration of matter without any metaphysical self.

11. 11. The four forms of life are देव, मनुष्य, नरक and तिर्यक् the fifth being मोक्ष. See I, 12, 3, notes.

12. 4. For the sixteen principles of meditation, see Tatt. Sutra VI, 24.

12. 5. The eight guṇas are—

मद्यमांसमधुत्यागैः सहाणुव्रतपञ्चकम् ।
अष्टौ मूलगुणानाहुर्गृहिणां श्रमणोत्तमाः ॥ RKS 66.

12. 6 Belief in false divinities, scriptures and teachers are respectively called देवमूढता, शास्त्रमूढता and गुरुमूढता ।

The eight prides are—

ज्ञानं पूजां कुलं जातिं बलमृद्धिं तपो वपुः ।
अष्टावाश्रित्य मानित्वं स्मयमाहुर्गतस्मयाः ॥ RKS. 25.

12. 7–8 The six undeserving (Anāyatana) are कुदेव, कुशास्त्र, कुगुरु and devotees of these three.

12. 9. साहंमिय etc–Paying a particular regard for co-religionists is called Vātsalya,

12. 10. Absence of शंका, कांक्षा and विचिकित्सा are the first three of the eight requisites of 'Right Faith' the remaining five being अमूढदृष्टित्व, उपगूहन, स्थितिकरण, वात्सल्य and प्रभावना, for an exposition of which see, RKS. 11–18.

13. 2. The twelve kinds of austeries are :—

अणसणमवमोदरियं रसपरिचाओ य वुत्तिपरिसंखा ।
कायस्स च परितावो विवित्तसयणासणं छट्ठं ॥
पायच्छित्तं विणयं वेज्जावच्चं तहे व सज्झायं ।
झाणं च विउस्सग्गो अब्भंतरओ तवो एसो ॥

For exposition see Mūlācāra, 345 ff.

पंडियमरण–The three kinds of deaths are—

तिविहं भणियं मरणं बालाणं बालपंडियाणं च ।
तइयं पंडियमरणं जं केवलिणो अणुमरंति ॥

Mūlācāra, 59.

13. 5. The fifteen parts of the three larger divisions of Jambudvipa constitute the Karmabhūmi where the six occupations of life asi, masi, krsi, sevā, śilpa and vāṇijya are prevalent.

13. 11. The enlightened souls are of two kinds Sakala and Nikala i. e. those that retain their corporeal existence (Arihanta) and those that are absolved from it (Siddha). These constitute the 13th and 14th stages of spiritual advancement.

14. 9. चरमसरीराया६–charama śarira means corporeal existence for the last time i. e. before salvation.

17. 25. करे–Imperative form, rather unusual. The alternative reading करो is identical with the impera. in Hindi.

17. 41. पयापंचवित्तो–पंचपदयुक्तः (°वित्तः, °वृत्तः वा). टि. The five padas are, णमो अरिहंताणं, णमो सिद्धाणं, णमो आयरियाणं, णमो उवज्झायाणं, णमो सव्वसाहूणं ।

17. 42. अयाराइवण्णं–etc. Recollecting the word ' अर्ह ' his life passed away; सरं-स्मरन्, though the gloss explains it as रकारसहितं, and णहं as हकारः । It would be better if we could read रहं (letter र and ह) in place of णहं.

18. 9. पल्ल-पल्य–is a measure of time, for which see Tatt. Sutra chapt. III, J. G. Dict. Appx. D.

18. 10. अवही–अवधिज्ञान is one of the five kinds of knowledge ' मतिश्रुतावधिमनःपर्ययकेवलानि ज्ञानम् । अवधिज्ञान is direct knowledge circumscribed by द्रव्य, क्षेत्र, काल and भाव. See Tatt. Sutra I, 9.

18. 12 ' His dress fastened over with a gold-knife '( कनककर्तरीगाढनेपथ्यः). कत्तरी is equivalent to Hindi कटार which formed a necessary part of a gentleman's dress. This fashion is now observed only in marriages when a bridegroom is necessarily dressed over with it. The word has been misunderstood by Dr. Gune who takes it to mean ' some war-like feat '. ( See Bhavis. II, 2, 7 ; Sanat. 655, 3 ).

18. 13. तुरुक्ख–तुरुष्क is a fragrant aromatic resin of a Javanese tree. The name suggests that it was first introduced in India by the Turks. Hence it is also called Yāvana or Yavana-deśaja ( 'तुरुष्कः पिण्डकः सिह्लो यावनोऽपि ' अमर. ' सिल्हकस्तु तुरुष्कः

स्याद् यती यवनदेशजः ; BNR. p. 107 ). In Vernacular it is called लोहबान or लोभान from Arabic 'luban jawi' i. e. frank incense of Java, from which is also derived the English word ' benzoin ', जक्खकद्दम-यक्षकर्दम is a compound of various kinds of incense 'कर्पूरागरुकस्तूरी कक्कोलैर्यक्षकर्दमः ' अमर. दप्प-दर्प musk.

18. 18. उब्भेवि-उद्भाव्य raising up.

19. 12. सराइय-सरागा.

20. 11. 'He should leave the bed at sun-rise when the smaller beings, two sensed and others are still asleep'. सोहेइ-त्यजेत् equivalent to Marathi सोडणें; Hindi छोडना. Or we may split it as सो हेइ ( हा to abandon.)

20. 15. तिविहेण-त्रिविधेन मनोवाक्कायेन.

20. 16. This describes the कृतिकर्म ( क्रियाकर्म ) for which and its thirty two faults ( अइयार-अतिचार ) see Mūlācāra 601-607.

दो णदं तु जधाजादं बारसावत्तमेव य ।
चदुस्सिरं तिसुद्धं च किदियम्मं पउंजदे ॥ etc.

Āvarta is performed by joining the palms of both hands and giving them a circular motion from right to left. Three such āvartas and four nods of the head are performed towards each of the four directions at the time of Kṛtikarma or Śāmāyika ( see RKS. 139.).

20. 17. For the faults of तणुसग्ग-तनुसर्ग ( कायोत्सर्ग ) as a form of penance see Mūlācāra, 668 ff.

21. 5. 'Raising up ( the morsel of food ) he should offer it to the sage himself' or we may read करे वि. i. e. should be offered in the sage's hand. ( See Mūlacāra, 820 ).

21. 6. सचित्त-green vegetables are unfit for monks and so also fruits that contain much seed. ( See Mulācāra 826 ). For other impurities and precautions of food see ibid chapt. VI ( 420-501 ).

21. 33-37. Various articles suitable for presentation to temples are named.

21. 39. The alternative reading पयंतु (feast ending with milk) suits better.

21. 41. Read the line as सुवीउ सुखेत्ते सुदिण्णु पयत्ते । 'Good seed, well sown in a good field, thrives.'

22. 7-11. The water pitchers used for his coronation-bath are fancied as clouds, Brahmins, teachers, paramours, divine trees, fools, singers, kirāta boys and heaps of glory, by means of paronomastic adjectives.

25. 14. सुक्कझाण-शुक्लध्यान pure meditation is one of the four kinds of Dhyāna, for which see Mūlācāra, 674 ff.

25. 15. दढकम्मदुगंठि–The strong tie of the eight karmas ( ज्ञानावरणीय, दर्शनावरणीय etc. see Tatt. Sutra. ).

25. 17. ' Instantly Ananga ( Nāga k. ) became absolved of his body and attained salvation having shattered cupid ( अनंगविदारकः ).

प्रशस्ति—

4. विवरि–विवृत्य, or it may be read विवरिवि दावइ, the sense remaining the same.

6. 'May rains shower whenever thought of.'

8. For पंचकल्लाणइं see II, 11, 2 notes.

10–12. ' Peace be to my parents named Keśava and Mugdhādevi, Brahmins of Kāśyapa gotra, who though devotees of Śiva, both died by the Jaina form of renunciation which destroys sin, having had their ears filled with the nector of the teacher's words.' गुरु–दिगम्बर, टि.

14. The gloss paraphrases दंगइयहो as भट्टस्य. The name also occurs towards the end of Mahāpurāṇa of our author, where he appears to be one of the sons of Bharata ( होउ संति सुअणहो दंगइयहो ). See also introduction

The six verses at the end eulogize Nanna, the author's patron and tell us once more that he composed the work at his request (see I, 3–4).

Verse 6. कव्वपिसल्ल–काव्यपिशाच, the poets title occurs once before I, 2, 10. Even in Sanskrit Piśāca or Piśācikā, at the end of a compound, denotes excessive fondness e. g.

आयुधपिशाचिका–(Bāla Rāmāyana 4.)
आयुधपिशाची–(Anargha Rāghava 4. ).

The poet has justified the title by the volume and the quality of his poetry (see Intro.).
